SAW SUTTON SHOOT HIMSELF IN HEAD

THREATENED HIS COMRADES

Tried to Get Guns to Protect Themselves—Once Shot Up the Camp, Officers Declare.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 20.—The proceedings at to-day's session of the court of inquiry which is investigating the death of Lieut. James N. Sutton, U. S. M. C., of Portland, Ore., took a sensational turn when First Lieut. W. F. Bevan, U. S. M. C., now attached to the battleship New Jersey, took the witness stand near the adjournment of court and related his part in the tragedy in the early morning of Oct. 13, 1907, when young Sutton met his death. Lieut. Bevan was officer of the guard in the marine camp on that night and one of the first men to reach the scene of Sutton's death.

Like Lieut. Adams, he testified that Sutton deliberately shot himself, but beyond that cardinal fact his description of Sutton's alleged suicide varied in important details from the story told by Adams, the man who said he had participated in a life and death struggle with the young Lieutenant just prior to his act of self-destruction.

The most glaring disagreement with Adams's story came when Bevan testified that two officers were on top of Sutton trying to hold him down, to prevent his using his revolvers, when Sutton freed an arm from under him and fired a bullet into his own brain after some one remarked that Sutton had killed Lieut. Roelker. Adams testified that he had risen from Lieut. Sutton's body and that Sutton lay exhausted and alone on the ground when he raised his right hand and fired the shot that ended his life.

Bevan's testimony also revealed that a situation bordering on a Wild West rampage had existed in the marine camp just prior to the shooting, when Sutton had been trying to make Lieut. Roelker dance by leveling two revolvers at his feet and afterward rushed from the camp, disregarding his arrest, by the officer of the guard, and shouting that he would quit the marines for good and all.

In addition to Lieut. Bevan, Lieut. Adams and Lieut. Osterman were on the stand to-day. Lawyer Davis, Mrs. Sutton's counsel, completed his cross-examination of Adams in quick order after court opened, and then Lieut. Osterman took the stand and his direct and cross-examination took up most of the day. Osterman, as a member of Sutton's automobile party on the night of Oct. 12, corroborated Lieut. Adams's story except to add that he believed Sutton was badly intoxicated that night.

Commander John Hood, senior member of the board of inquiry, was called upon to make rulings to-day on objections raised to the questions by both Major Leonard and Mr. Davis. As the proceedings advance more caution is being exercised by the Judge Advocate as well as the other interested attorneys, to curb the latitude hitherto allowed the witnesses in testifying. Major Leonard said at the adjournment of court to-day that he did not expect the inquiry to be completed this week.

Lawyer Davis began to question Adams to-day about an interview he had with Sutton's sister, Mrs. Hugh A. Parker, shortly after young Sutton's death. Mrs. Parker, who is attending the hearings with her mother, had wanted to question all the young officers who were supposed to know something about her brother's death. She had asked Adams to grant her a talk alone, and tell the truth about the matter, according to the tesimony.

Adams Sticks to His Story.

"I want you to state again if you saw Lieut. Sutton kill himself," Mr. Davis asked.

"As I have said, I saw Sutton draw a revolver from under him in his right hand, like this, [illustrating the motion,] turn his head to the right, and fire. I saw the flash jump about six inches," Lieut. Adams replied.

Mr. Davis pressed the question as to whether Sutton fired the fatal shot with the large service revolver or the small one.

"It wasn't very light around there," said Lieut. Adams, "but it was my idea that he shot himself with the small revolver."

Mr. Davis called the witness's attention to his testimony of yesterday, in which he said quite positively that it was the small weapon.

"I have told you half a dozen times already this morning that I did not positively identify the gun," said the witness. "It didn't seem as if it was as large as the service gun."

Mr. Davis referred to a reported interview with Adams in a New York paper of July 7, in which Adams was quoted as saying the Suttons were trying to "trump up a murder charge against two who were innocent," and asked the witness if he had said anything like that.

Major Leonard, the Judge Advocate, objected to this line of questioning.

"This witness knows what he is charged with," said Major Leonard. "He knows there are no charges against him as far as the department is concerned."

Mr. Davis argued that, if besides obtaining counsel Adams had made a statement that he considered himself accused of murder, it had a direct bearing upon his credibility as a witness to show whether he was testifying under a veiled sense of guilt or as any ordinary witness might do to enlighten the court truthfully upon all the facts.

Commander Hood, presiding, ruled that Adams did not have to answer the question.

What Adams Told Sutton's Sister.

Mr. Davis questioned the witness in regard to his interview with Mrs. Parker, Sutton's sister, soon after Sutton's death.

"Did Mrs. Parker ask you at that time to make a statement of the truth of this whole affair?" asked Mr. Davis.

The witness said he believed she did.

"Did you make such a statement?"

"No, Sir," replied Adams.

"Assuming that you did make a statement, did not Mrs. Parker afterward tell you that it was not the truth?" asked Mr. Davis.

Adams said he did not remember making such a statement.

"I have told you before that I told Mrs. Parker to look up the records for the testimony of the first hearing if she wanted to find out anything, and furthermore, Mrs. Parker was willing to talk with the other officers in twos and LIVERMORE'S OFFICE VACANT.

Plunger Said to Have Met Heavy Reverses in Wall Street.

Jesse L. Livermore, whose ups and downs as a plunger in stocks, cotton, and wheat were widely chronicled in 1907-8, has been missing from his accustomed place in the offices of E. F. Hutton & Co. of 35 New Street for several weeks, and his name has been erased from the door of one of the inner offices in which he used to make his headquarters when his profits were large. Inquiries about him were received yesterday with some impatience at the office of Hutton & Co.

It was current gossip yesterday in the brokerage offices that Mr. Livermore has been a heavy loser on the short side of cotton and wheat. In August last year he was reported to have been one of the leaders of the bull pool in cotton which collapsed disastrously after fighting the decline for more than a week. When the market finally went to pieces with a drop of $2.50 a bale he was reported to have lost close to a million.

Before that time his profits from cotton and wheat operations were said to have amounted to over $2,000,000, and he was pointed to as the most successful of recent plungers. He first became prominent as a speculator in the bear market in stocks in 1907, when he was said to have run an original stake of $25,000 up to $250,000. After a number of heavy setbacks he got $50,000 together, which he ran up to over $2,000,000 before his disastrous bull operations last year in the cotton market. This Spring he is said to have turned bear, and it is on that side of the cotton and wheat market that he is now reported to have met the reverses which account for his recent absence from his old haunts.

On July 1 W. D. Hutton, one of the board members of E. F. Hutton & Co., withdrew from the firm, forming a new partnership with his father, although continuing to make his headquarters at the New Street office of E. F. Hutton & Co.

RUSH INTO NEW COMBINE.

Twenty Dry Goods Houses Want to Enter United Dry Goods Company.

It came out yesterday that twenty dry goods houses have made application to be admitted into the United Dry Goods Company of New York, of which the O'Neill-Adams Company is a constituent in this city. These applications have been made without any undue influence being placed upon the firms, which have been induced to apply entirely by considerations of a mercantile nature.

The purchasing power of an amalgamation has appealed to the proprietors of many dry goods stores who see the advantages of the new organization. The United Dry Goods Company has a capital of $51,000,000. It was formed in May last to take over the assets of the Associated Merchants' Company, which controlled the H. B. Claflin Company, the James McCreery Company, the Adams Dry Goods Company, and other large retail concerns, of which the combination known as the O'Neill-Adams firm in Sixth Avenue is very popular.

An indication of this firm's popularity is seen in the fact that of the total imports of coffee into the United States, the O'Neill-Adams house actually sold one per cent., that is to say, 1,500,000 out of 109,000,000 pounds.

One of the advantages claimed by the association is the low price at which the output of factories can be purchased for the benefit of consumers. The O'Neill-Adams management asserts that, without demoralizing any branch of business, it can offer the consumer many grades of goods at exceedingly low prices.

NO HOPE FOR DR. HUNTINGTON

Rector of Grace Church Still Growing Weaker—Daughter on Her Way Home

Special to The New York Times.

NAHANT, Mass., July 20.—Continued weakness was reported to-day in the case of the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of Grace Church, New York. The statement issued this forenoon at the home of Dr. Huntington's son-in-law, Royal Robbins, where the patient is, was similar to that given out yesterday. It said:

"Dr. Huntington is losing strength. He may live for several days, but there is no hope for recovery."

The afternoon bulletin stated:

"Dr. Huntington is growing weaker. His condition is critical."

During the evening little change could be observed in the condition of Dr. Huntington by the members of the family at his bedside, but the attending physician said the gradual weakening noted during the day continued.

Miss Margaret Huntington had scarcely left this country for a tour of Europe when her father was taken ill. He had come on to Nahant to be with his married daughter because Margaret could not be with him to care for the Summer home in Maine. Word was at once sent to the girl of her father's illness, followed by other cables telling of the serious turn. She had just reached the other side when the messages came to her, and she at once took passage back on the next boat. She is now hurrying across the ocean to reach her father's bedside before he dies.

Dr. Huntington has been informed of the attempt his daughter is making to reach his bedside, and has been cheered up by the news, but he is so weak now that it is not believed she can reach him in time.

The Rev. Karl Reiland, assistant rector of Grace Church, was quoted yesterday as saying:

"We are forced to admit that Dr. Huntington is dangerously and almost hopelessly ill. No one can say with absolute certainty just what the trouble is, but cancer is feared by the physicians in charge, and at last reports he is said to be growing weaker."

VACHRIS COMING BACK.

He and Other Detectives to Report on Petrosino Murder.

ROME, July 20.—J. R. Crowley, A. B. Simon, and A. F. Vachris, three American detectives, left here to-day on their way back to the United States after making a thorough investigation of the murder of Lieut. Joseph Petrosino, the chief of the Italian bureau of the New York detective force, who was assassinated at Palermo, Sicily, last March.

The American detectives were assisted by the Italian police, and it is understood an important report on the case will be made when they reach New York.

DEADLOCK ON TARIFF, PAYNE AIDING TAFT

Conference Is Halted and Aldrich and Cannon Hasten to the White House.

HOUSE CONFEREES IN ROW

Payne Sharply Rebukes Fordney for Siding with Aldrich—Ten Senate Insurgents Plan a Further Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The plain sailing that had apparently characterized the proceedings of the Conference Committee on the Tariff bill came to an obvious and abrupt end to-day. At about noon, after a session of an hour and a half a complete deadlock was reached, and an adjournment was suddenly taken until tomorrow.

The House conferees repaired at once to the south end of the Capitol, where Mr. Payne engaged in conferences with Representatives interested in the schedules at stake. Mr. Aldrich drove to the White House in company with Speaker Cannon and had a prolonged conference with the President. Later Mr. Aldrich and Vice President Sherman discussed the details of the parliamentary situation.

The particular point at issue when adjournment was taken to-day is said to have been gloves and hosiery, on which the House members are standing out for the higher rates. But there are many other differences, and it is practically admitted to-night that the deadlock meant simply that the schedules on which there were differences had been shoved aside and that the first attempt to raise them had caused trouble.

The unexpected termination of the morning session of the conference started many rumors among Senators and Representatives as to the occurrences then. It was said that strong language had passed between Chairman Payne and Senator Aldrich. The facts, as later ascertained, discredited this account, but reveal for the present at least the apparent impossibility of further advance.

Payne Startles Aldrich.

Discussion in the committee had dragged all morning over the question of free raw materials. Efforts to put through the President's programme were blocked, and no progress could be made on schedules affected, as many rates on finished products depended on the rates on raw products. After fruitless discussion of these points they were laid aside.

In this discussion it was shown that in spite of the seeming harmony between Mr. Aldrich and the President the Senator from Rhode Island has not yet brought himself to support the President's policy. It was Mr. Payne who asked that an agreement be reached for free hides. To that proposal Mr. Aldrich, it is stated, countered with a proposal for a compromise at 7½ per cent.

That was refused and Mr. Payne then asked for free iron ore. Again Mr. Aldrich made it plain that he was yielding only where he had to. He offered, in compromise, first, a duty of 20 cents a ton, only 5 cents off the original Senate rate. Failing that, he asked for 15 cents, and then for 12½ cents. To all these offers Mr. Payne turned a cold shoulder.

Then, suddenly, hosiery and gloves were taken up. Here Mr. Aldrich demanded the acceptance of the lower Senate rates. Mr. Payne is said not to have been entirely averse to reductions from the House rates, but he suggested that corresponding concessions on cotton goods be made by the Senate. That brought the Senate conferees up in arms, and it was stated flatly that such reductions were impossible. In view of that sharp rejoinder, Mr. Payne is quoted as having stated that it seemed that matters had gone as far as possible, and that unless both sides were willing to make reductions there was no further use in talking over threadbare subjects.

Shortly afterward adjournment was taken. It was declared by the conferees that the settlement of dfferences between the two houses had gone so far that any further agreements would need practically the consent of persons in one house or the other who were interested in particular rates. To enable conferences with those men to be held adjournment was taken, it was said, and later in the afternoon Mr. Payne was in his committee room, surrounded by his followers. Still later, after the Speaker and Mr. Aldrich had left the White House, Mr. Payne went up and had a talk with Mr. Taft.

Cannon Is Aiding Littauer.

The significance of the Speaker's visit to the White House with Mr. Aldrich lies in the fact that Mr. Cannon, although he does not pretend to be a tariff expert, holds much to heart the rates on gloves which were inserted into the Payne bill chiefly on the representations of ex-Representative Littauer. Mr. Littauer was for many years one of the leading spirits in the Speaker's inner circle. The President yesterday talked earnestly with Mr. Cannon in behalf of the lower rates on gloves and hosiery, but as far as could be seen he made no impression. At 10 o'clock this morning the Speaker was invited by telephone to a second conference, and Mr. Aldrich was summoned for the same hour.

What happened at the White House is not known, but Mr. Payne's challenge to the Senate leaders to reduce cotton goods in return for reductions on gloves and hosiery has put a proposition within the President's immediate observation that is being watched with acute interest by the insurgents in the Senate. They made their biggest fight for reductions on cotton goods.

House Conferrees at Odds.

The general disclaimer of personal breaches between Mr. Payne and Mr. Aldrich does not apply to breaches known to have occurred among members of the house delegation in the conference. Between Mr. Payne and Mr. Fordney yesterday, for instance, there was a sharp passage.

That Mr. Payne had little part in selecting the conferrees to represent the House in the conference is well known. He made recommendations that were ignored and the Speaker made his own selections. Mr. Payne is said to have complained to some of his friends at the time that the Conference Committee had been "packed" with high protectionists, and that Senator Aldrich had been able to wield more influence with the Speaker than had he as Chairman of the committee which prepared the House bill.

When Mr. Fordney, who had been

FRENCH CABINET OUT; ITS DEFEAT SUDDEN

Adverse Vote in Chamber Follows Attack on Delcasse by Premier Clemenceau.

LOSES TEMPER IN DEBATE

Piqued by Criticism on Naval Matters, He Brings Up Algeciras Affair and Deputies Are Indignant.

PARIS, July 20.—The Clemenceau Cabinet fell suddenly to-night under dramatic circumstances at the conclusion of a violent debate over the naval scandals, extending over several days.

M. Delcassé, Chairman of the investigating commission, led the attack upon the naval administration, especially during the incumbency of M. Pelletan and M. Thomson, former Ministers of Marine. M. Picard, who succeeded M. Thomson, had promised in the name of the Government to complete a series of reforms, both in the administration of the department and the methods of construction, and the chamber was ready to vote confidence in the Government when an incident occurred which changed the majority into a minority.

Premier Clemenceau, who has always been an adversary of M. Delcassé, smarting under the criticisms and doubtless overconfident of a majority, which on July 15, upon the general policies of the Government, was 182, taunted the ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, who was thrown overboard by the Rouvier Ministry at the dictation of Germany during the crisis of 1905, with having led France to humiliation at Algeciras.

Raising the spectre of that chapter of France's foreign history, in which Delcassé was sacrificed, was a fatal error. Instantly there was an uproar of dissent from both sides of the chamber. Delcassé flung back the taunt in Clemenceau's face with bitter words, declaring, amid cheers, that France had gone to Algeciras in the interest of peace.

Hot words were bandied back and forth. It was a veritable duel between two enemies. Delcassé intimated that Clemenceau had inspired articles in the foreign press during the crisis, but the latter emphatically denied this imputation. The Premier seemed for the first time in his parliamentary career to lose his head. Finally Delcassé, as he was entering upon an explanation of the situation in 1905, drew himself up proudly and said:

"I shall say nothing further on that subject; I have nothing to fear. Nothing in the past, nothing in our common memories of twenty-five years embarrasses me. If I look back I see I have left something besides ruins."

Delcasse Enrages Clemenceau.

Then, turning directly to Clemenceau, he said:

"You were President of the Naval Investigating Commission of 1904. Your unsparing attacks upon every Government during twenty-five years seemed sufficient guarantee that you would find the root of the evil. What were the results, I ask?"

Clemenceau, now evidently in a rage, tried to parry the thrust by returning to the charge.

"Your policy as Foreign Minister," he shouted, "led us to the greatest humiliation France has experienced in twenty years."

Another storm of hostile cries arose, several Deputies crying, "It is an outrage to say that." But the Premier tried to assume his old cynical air.

"Oh, no false indignation, I pray you," he exclaimed. "You brought us to the verge of war without military preparation."

Again the tumult was redoubled.

"Yes," he shouted above the roar, "the whole world knew that the Ministers of War and Navy, when the question was put to them, replied that France was not ready. I have not humiliated France; Delcassé has done that."

The scene when the Premier took his seat was indescribable. Amid the wildest excitement the vote was taken, and when it was announced that the Government had been beaten, 212 to 176, Clemenceau clapped his hat on his head, pulling it far down over his eyes, and stalked out of the Chamber, followed by the other Ministers, in token that he intended to resign.

The Chamber then adjourned until Thursday.

M. Clemenceau went immediately to the Elysée Palace, and told the story to President Fallières, who seemed stupefied at the incident which caused the fall of the Cabinet, but he accepted the resignation of the Premier and his Ministers.

Downfall Amazes Paris.

There is but one opinion in Paris to-night—astonishment that an old parliamentary war horse like Clemenceau should have committed political suicide by his awkwardness in recalling the Algeciras affair upon the eve of adjournment, when the Government was assured of a majority on the naval question. The Premier's action drove about fifty members of the Republican "bloc" into a combination with the Right and Extreme Left, unhorsing the man whose Ministry has been the longest in the history of the third republic, and who for three years has been absolute master in France.

More than sixty members of the majority, enough to have saved the day, were absent, visiting their parliamentary confrères of Sweden when the vote was taken.

Many times during his Ministry, M. Clemenceau apparently was on the eve of defeat, as many strong combinations, especially by the enemies of the income tax, were formed to accomplish his downfall, and often there was much secret opposition in the ranks of the majority. But when the decisive moment came the rebels never dared to brave Clemenceau's whip.

The fall of the Cabinet was so unexpected that the political world is completely at sea as to who will be Clemenceau's successor at the head of the Government. President Fallières will consult with the Presidents of the Chambers tomorrow, in accordance with the usual custom. The name of Leon Bourgeois, former Premier and former Minister of Foreign Affairs, is most frequently mentioned, but his age and health are against him. M. Briand, Minister of Justice; M. Poincaré, former Minister of Finance; M. Millerand, former Minister of Commerce; M. Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Barthou, Minister of Public Works, and M. Delcassé are also mentioned, in the order named.

The Socialists naturally are overjoyed at Clemenceau's downfall. M. Jaurès, the Socialist leader in the Chamber, said: "With Clemenceau disappears the most dangerous man in the republic."

WRIGHT SETS NEW AMERICAN RECORD

'BULLY!' SAYS ELDER WRIGHT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Orville Wright established a new American aeroplane record to-day by remaining aloft in his machine for 1 hour 20 minutes and 45 seconds. In doing so he broke his own record of a fraction over one hour and fourteen minutes, made last year over the same course at Fort Myer. He also put his aeroplane through its paces and called out the cheers of the crowd, in which were a number of Cabinet officials, a large gathering of officers of the army and navy, and other dignitaries.

The highest point reached by the aviator was 300 feet, but he did not maintain this altitude long. His average was about 150 feet. In the eighty-three times that he circled the parade ground it was estimated that he covered close to sixty miles, which would give to the aeroplane a speed of approximately forty-five miles an hour. The brothers, however, shook their heads when this was suggested, declaring that the speed was not much greater than they have been attaining in the last two days, about forty miles.

When the machine had swooped to earth after flying over the tops of the grass for two complete circuits of the parade ground, seeking a good place to settle, Wilbur strode over to it. For the first time since he arrived for the trials the elder brother showed signs of enthusiasm. He grasped his brother's hand and shook it warmly, placing the other on his shoulder.

"Bully," he exclaimed.

Then he became the elder brother again. "Why didn't you—" he began. His voice trailed off, but they walked down the field toward the balloon house, into which the men of the Signal Corps were hurrying the machine. They argued all the way, Wilbur evidently calling Orville's attention to some error made in the flight. So earnest were they in the argument that the crowd which had rushed to congratulate Orville held back and respected their conference.

Broken Rope Delays Flight.

The flight was the most spectacular yet held at the army post. Perfect weather greeted the aeroplane when it was wheeled from the shed a few minutes after 5 o'clock. It was borne quickly down the field to the starting track and placed in position. Orville tried the engine and found it to be working in better shape than ever, so the weights were ordered raised.

The 1,600 pound mass of metal had been hauled into position at the top of the derrick and the starting rope had been made fast to the underbody of the machine, when there was a snap, and the heavy weights came down with a run. It was found that the rope had broken, and for a moment it was feared that the flight would have to be abandoned, for a new rope of the necessary length was not in stock at Fort Myer. Rear Admiral Hutch I. Cone, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering of the Navy Department, and Lieut. Commander Andre M. Procter, however, took the broken pieces, and in a few minutes had made a fine splice.

"You see, a sailor ashore is sometimes good for something," said Commander Procter, laughingly.

Because of the accident it was 6:20 o'clock before the aeroplane was launched. It did not clear itself of the runner which carries it along the monorail as quickly as was desirable, and in consequence for a moment it looked as though Orville would not be able to raise it sufficiently to clear the balloon house. But he made a short turn and raised his forward planes. The aeroplane responded quickly, and from eighty feet on the first round it rose to an altitude of 150 feet.

Orville held to this height, and was evidently trying to ascertain how rigidly he could hold the machine on a given course. He succeeded in demonstrating the perfect control exercised by the forward planes, for he steered a true course.

Cuts Short Circles and Eights.

On the fifteenth and sixteenth circuits he suddenly brought the machine into the centre of the field and began cutting circles so short that it appeared as though the flier were turning almost within its own length. Some of these were so abrupt that they were not more than 400 feet in diameter. Again in the twenty-sixth circuit he undertook the same feat, the complete circuit being so short that it was made in twenty-five seconds.

Swinging wide again, the aeroplane flew down the field and far out over the rough country behind the balloon shed. It coursed through the air above the trees in Arlington Cemetery and almost over the heads of the crowd banked at the north end of the parade ground. For a number of rounds this was kept up until the fifty-fifth, when it was seen that the driver was contemplating some new manoeuvre. As he reached the end of the field on his flight back he threw the rudder to the left and crossed the field, reversing the direction of his flight. He swept past the head of the field and half way down the course, again guiding his craft diagonally over the parade ground and completing a figure eight. The crowd began to cheer the evolution, but their cheers died in their throats, for the aviator was seen to be reversing again. Twice more he executed the manoeuvre, after which he resumed his usual course, circling to the left.

On the sixty-sixth circuit the aeroplane sought a higher level than that on which it had been manoeuvring. It pointed its nose upward and soared like a big white bird steadily up, until it was whirling through space 300 feet above the ground. Wilbur Wright, who maintained his place near the starting derrick, took observations of the height, and appeared to be somewhat worried over the altitude, but he made no distinct sign. After maintaining this height for the space of a little more than one circuit, Orville brought his craft down to the 150-foot level again.

Passed Over the Crowd.

Presumably to accustom himself to passing over crowds Orville toward the end of his long voyage drove his machine directly above the throng of 4,000 persons gathered at the north end of the field.

The landing was almost as spectacular

AMERICAN KILLED IN BAVARIA.

Merchant Named Ringelmann Falls from Hotel Window.

STREITBERG, Bavaria, July 20.—A Mr. Ringelmann, whose first name is not known, a New York merchant, was killed to-day by a fall from a window in the top of the Hotel Scheurmann.

Mr. Ringelmann arrived here a day or two ago in an automobile, with the intention of entering a sanitarium. He was unable to get accommodations in the sanitarium because of its being overcrowded.

QUEEN FELICITATES NORDICA.

Also Congratulates George W. Young on Their Coming Marriage.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 20.—Mme. Lillian Nordica has received royal congratulations on her approaching marriage to George W. Young, which she told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day would take place before her return to America in November, but the exact date of which has not yet been fixed.

Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, gave a dinner Saturday night in honor of Mme. Nordica and Mr. Young, and Mrs. Ritchie gave them a dinner on Sunday. After the latter affair the guests all repaired to the house of Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, where the Queen had dined, and Mme. Nordica sang for her Majesty, after which the Queen congratulated Mme. Nordica and Mr. Young upon their coming marriage.

HUNGER STRIKE SPREADS.

One Suffragette in Critical Condition After Fast of 151 Hours.

LONDON, July 20.—The success of several Suffragettes in obtaining their release from prison yesterday by carrying out a "hunger strike," has caused all of the Suffragettes in Holloway Jail to adopt this method for securing their freedom.

Miss Elsie MacKenzie was discharged from prison to-day in a critical condition, having gone 151 hours without tasting food.

TRAIN RUNS THROUGH FIRE.

Third Avenue Elevated Platform at 138th Street Ablaze as It Passes.

Several hundred passengers had an exciting experience, last night, when a northbound train on the Third Avenue elevated railroad put on extra speed and shot through the flames of a burning platform at 138th Street. The fire, caused by defective insulation of wires under the platform, had gained considerable headway, and a number of women on the train were somewhat alarmed.

The firemen quenched the fire in about half an hour. They were forced to rip away part of the platform on the uptown station, and passengers intending to alight there were carried to 143d Street.

A large crowd watched the fire, and the police reserves of the Alexander Avenue Station had their hands already full when a second alarm for a small fire at 542 East 139th Street was sent in. This was caused by a gas jet setting fire to a lace curtain, and was slight.

BELMONT GETS BACK REALTY.

Property Valued at $7,000,000 Retransferred to Him by the Rothschilds.

Real estate in Manhattan and the Bronx valued at $7,000,000, it was learned yesterday, has been transferred back to August Belmont by Nathaniel M. Rothschild of the London, Paris, and Berlin banking firm. The same property was transferred by Mr. Belmont to M. Rothschild last year, and it was intimated then that the conveyance was much in the nature of collateral for a loan from the Rothschilds.

In the first transfer the deeds were drawn in October, 1907, but were not recorded until the following January, when the transfer became known for the first time. The deeds filed last week were not made public at all, and it was only learned yesterday, through deeds recorded in the Register's office, that there had been reconveyed to Mr. Belmont the Park Row Building, at 13 to 21 Park Row; a plot of five lots at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighty-first Street, and parcels in the Bronx, in Mott Avenue, the Harlem River, and in 138th and Exterior Streets.

RECOVER DIAMOND NECKLACE.

Valuable Piece of Jewelry Said to Have Been Found in a Pawnshop.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 20.—The police of this town received word to-day that the New York police have recovered a diamond necklace in which are fifty-four stones, each weighing three-eighths of a carat, which was pawned in New York by a resident of Stamford, whose name is known to the police here.

The name of the loser of the necklace has not been divulged by the police, nor will they tell the name of the man alleged to have pawned it in New York.

The police here late last night denied that they knew anything about a missing necklace. At Police Headquarters the Lieutenant in charge of the Detective Bureau protested that he didn't know of any message sent to Stamford notifying the police there of the discovery of any piece of jewelry.

VANDERBILT FINED $10.

Cornelius Guilty of Overspeeding—He's Abroad, So His Lawyer Pays.

When Cornelius Vanderbilt was called yesterday in Special Sessions to answer to a charge of overspeeding his automobile on Madison Avenue, between Fifty-third and Fifty-seventh Streets, on June 28, Frank L. Polk, his counsel, told Justice Deuel that the defendant was spending the Summer abroad and would not be able to appear in person.

When Mr. Vanderbilt was arraigned in the police court at the time of the arrest, he pleaded not guilty, giving his age as 35 years and his address at 677 Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Polk told the court that the charge made by Policeman Faber, who arrested Mr. Vanderbilt, stating that the car was going at the rate of thirty miles an hour would not be disputed.

Mr. Vanderbilt was found guilty, and the choice was given him of paying a fine of $10 or going to jail for two days.

Mr. Polk paid the fine.

MAYOR BACK TO DEAL WITH BUILDING CODE

POLITICAL GOSSIPS BUSY

Some of Them Point Out That He and McCarren Now Have a Fine Club to Use on Murphy.

Heralded only by a brief telegram announcing that he was on his way, Mayor McClellan returned to this city last night on the Empire State Express, interrupting a vacation at a distant camp in the Adirondacks, which was to have lasted until Aug. 1. As he stepped from the train he was asked whether the report was true that he had come back to supersede Acting Mayor McGowan at the hearing scheduled for this forenoon on the Building Code jammed through the Board of Aldermen last week under alleged pressure from Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy, the Mayor replied:

"I am the Mayor of the City of New York, charged with the chief responsibility in its administration, and I am here. I shall be at the City Hall to-morrow."

When the Mayor landed at the Grand Central political gossip had been busy with his precipitate return for many hours, or ever since a brief telegram announcing his intention had reached Assistant Corporation Counsel William B. Crowell, specially assigned to the Mayor's office, at the City Hall. The news that the Mayor was coming back to preside at the hearing for some reason caused grave concern among the advocates of the new code. Shortly after the message arrived a report was received from Pittsburg that W. D. Henry, President of the National Fireproofing Company, which would be greatly benefited should the Mayor sign the measure, had left Pittsburg post haste for this city to confer with the Mayor.

Political Gossips Busy.

It was pointed out by the political commentators that the situation which had arisen out of the passage of the Building Code, without a vote to spare, had given Mayor McClellan, for the first time, the whip hand over Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy, and that, were he so minded, he could readily use it to further any political ambitions he might harbor. A two-thirds vote would be necessary to pass the code over the Mayor's veto. Its passage with not a vote to spare had demonstrated that the advocates of the code could not possibly muster such a vote in favor of their pet measure.

This, it was pointed out, would put Tammany Leader Murphy at the Mayor's mercy. All these arguments, of course, were based on the presumption that Mr. Murphy really is taking as vivid an interest in what ultimately happens to the Building Code as the actions of his friends in the Board of Aldermen would seem to indicate.

Inevitably, Senator Patrick H. McCarren, and ex-Senator Maurice Featherson, Tammany Leader Murphy's foe in Manhattan, who is Tammany leader of the Twentieth Assembly District, were dragged into the political gossip which was busy with the Mayor's sudden return. In fact, this, even, was laid to concerted action by McCarren, Featherson, and John T. McCall, who is one of Mr. Featherson's political lieutenants and represented his district in the State Senate which passed out of existence on the first of the year.

If the code stands, the political gossip had it, Mr. Murphy would be glad to join in the chorus emanating from wherever State Chairman Conners is strong, in which Mayor McClellan is hailed as the next Democratic nominee for Governor. With this chorus Senator McCarren is said to be already in full accord. In the event of the adoption of the code, however, Mr. Murphy was credited with being willing to look with equanimity even on the Tiger beating a hasty retreat across the bridge, tail tucked between its legs, leaving a clear field to McCarren.

Mayor Wired to Crowell.

When Mayor McClellan sent a message to announce his return he did not send it to Acting Mayor McGowan, but to Assistant Corporation Counsel Crowell who in turn submitted it to Mr. McGowan. Friends of the Acting Mayor took exception to this. They looked upon it as a slight. One went so far as to say that the "Mayor had made his understudy in the City Hall look like a foolish schoolboy."

Up to the time the message arrived Mr. McGowan had been under the impression that he was to preside at the hearing, and his friends declare he had made thorough preparation for it by reading the Code through and appointing a board of experts to aid him in reaching a decision.

These things were communicated to Mayor McClellan when he left his train at the Grand Central Station, accompanied by Mrs. McClellan, who had come with him from the Adirondacks, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Crowell and Secretary Thomas Hassett of the Board of Water Supply, which is building the Ashokan Dam. In regard to the attitude of Mr. McGowan's friends, the Mayor said:

"Mr. McGowan was notified of my return this afternoon."

"What made you change your mind and return from your vacation, instead of letting Mr. McGowan dispose of the Building Code?" asked one reporter.

"I have not changed my mind," the Mayor replied. "When I left for the mountains I had no idea that the Building Code would pass the Board of Aldermen."

"But it is a week since it was passed," suggested one of the reporters.

"Yes, that's so," observed the Mayor.

"There is a rumor that Senator McCarren saw you up in the woods and urged you to return," the Mayor was told.

"That is a lie—an absolute lie," said the Mayor with great warmth.

The Mayor was told of the Pittsburg dispatch announcing the departure for this city of the National Fireproofing official.

"I have no appointment with Mr. Henry, nor have I ever heard of him," said the Mayor, as he made his way to a waiting carriage with Mrs. McClellan and the rest of his party.

McCarren Didn't Know.

Maurice Featherson and ex-Senator McCall could not be found last night. Senator McCarren, after a long chase, was overtaken by a TIMES reporter at Coney Island.

In response to a question bearing on the gossip that the Building Code might be used as a club on Tammany Leader Murphy to get from him whatever the Mayor and the Senator might want, Mr. McCarren said that was news to him, but not any more so than the information that Mayor McClellan was back in town.

"This is the first inkling I have of his return," said the Brooklyn statesman. "I want to say that I have had no communication with Mayor McClellan since he left, either by personal visit to the North Woods, by telegraph, by telephone, by mail, or itherwise—no, not as much as a picture postal card. The action of the Brooklyn Aldermen who all voted against the Building Code speaks for itself. It shows where Brooklyn stands. If the Mayor's return is to be vested with any political significance, leave me out, please."

Acting Mayor McGowan talked at length with THE TIMES reporter about the Building Code situation just before the Mayor's arrival in the city. He declared with great emphasis that he did not share his friends' view that the return of Mayor McClellan at this time could be construed as humiliating to himself.

McGowan Supports His Chief.

"The reason for the Mayor's return," said Mr. McGowan, "is as much of a mystery to me as it is to you, but if I be permitted to place my own construction on it, I should say that the Mayor was prompted by the kindest and most generous motives. He has probably seen, through the newspapers, to what extent politics has been injected into this Building Code situation, and I really believe that he is returning to relieve me of embarrassment.

"Perhaps, also, he regards this as a situation where the Mayor should act himself, and not shift responsibility to other shoulders, no matter how willing I might be to assume that responsibility. Some people are anxious to throw bricks at the Mayor. I am not one of them."

Didn't Want to be Misconstrued.

Mr. McGowan said that neither he nor the Mayor had any idea when the Mayor went away that the Building Code would pass the board. When asked what his own attitude was—whether he would have signed or vetoed the measure—he replied that he had not made up his mind.

"I could not do that very well before the public hearing," he added. "And I needed the advice of the three experts I had asked to assist in reaching a decision."

The three are Corporation Counsel Pendleton, C. B. G. Snyder, Superintendent of Buildings of the Board of Education, and Nelson P. Lewis, Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate.

"I am sure the Mayor will indorse what I have done," said Mr. McGowan. "This is the only interview I have given or intend to give on the subject. I had intended not to talk at all, but inasmuch as THE TIMES is asking me and my silence might be misconstrued, I have spoken very freely with a view of making it plain that I do not take exception to the Mayor taking hold of this matter in person."

The Mayor said the hearing would go on, as scheduled, this morning at 10 o'clock.

Henry Not Here to See Mayor.

President Henry of the National Fireproofing Company was found by a TIMES reporter last night at the Waldorf-Astoria, where he had arrived early in the evening. Mr. Henry had just come from the Cooper Union meeting, held to protest against the passage of the Building Code, which, it is alleged, will greatly benefit his company. He denied that he had come all the way from Pittsburg to meet Mayor McClellan.

"I came here to appear at the hearing which was scheduled to be held before Acting Mayor McGowan to-morrow," said Mr. Henry. "It is all news to me that Mayor McClellan is back. I have no appointment with him. If he has returned for any reason except his own desire to do so we certainly have not influenced his decision."

With Mr. Henry was Vice President Keasbey, General Eastern Manager of the National Fireproofing Company. Mr. Keasbey took occasion to deny a story printed in an evening paper to the effect that the company had appropriated $150,000 for law and legislation in this State, with $50,000 on the side for Tammany Hall.

THE TIMES reporter asked Mr. Henry what his relations were with Tammany Leader Murphy.

"Murphy? Murphy?—let me see," said Mr. Henry. "Who is Murphy? Is he a Republican?"

With this display of political innocence Mr. Henry departed for his room.

MASS MEETING AGAINST CODE.

Cooper Union Packed with Protestants Against Murphy's Rule.

The mass meeting of protest against the new Building Code at Cooper Union last night, called by Allan Robinson, President of the Allied Real Estate Interests, equaled in excitement the famous Jerome "heckle" and the session some weeks ago at which the Committee of One Hundred was formally launched.

The great assembly hall was packed to the doors with interested voters—plainly dressed, working men, who were interested listeners, to the techincal discussion of the provisions of the code. The meeting had a significance which cannot be escaped. Every time the name of "Tammany Hall, or even the word "politics" was mentioned the hooting started and lasted until the speaker changed the subject. All the men who addressed the audience except one spoke against the code, and then resolutions were unanimously and even uproarously passed condemning the measure and appealing to Acting Mayor McGowan to veto it. It was not known to the audience that Mayor McClellan had returned to town.

Speaker for the Code Hooted Down.

The only speaker who appeared to defend the code was John D. Moore, an engineer, who as a member of the Revision Commission practically drew the document, and has been Alderman Kenneally's right-hand man throughout the fight for its adoption. But the crowd would not listen to him. The hissing started the moment he was introduced by Mr. Robinson, who presided, as "the man who built the code," and lasted until he was finally forced to resume his seat.

The excitement during Mr. Moore's attempt to speak was heightened by the interference of L. S. Bedford, a printer, who nearly broke up One Hundred's meeting and was thrown out for his pains. Last night he did not get off so easily. He was arrested and taken to the Night Court.

Benjamin F. Traitel, President of the Building Trades Employers' Association, one of the speakers at the meeting, proposed resolutions which were passed with cheers, condemning the action of the police in throwing out Bedford, after Mr. Robinson had appealed in vain to the policemen to bring him back. This incident nearly broke up the meeting. It was the usual Cooper Union crowd, ready to follow the first leader who presented himself. A movement was started to walk out of the hall when Bedford was first seized by two big policemen, but Mr. Robinson succeeded in preventing this. He was successful for the reason that Mr. Moore was then on his feet and the crowd was anxious to stay and heckle him.

Mr. Moore was first presented early in the meeting. As he walked to the front of the platform he was greeted with loud hisses and hoots. But he shouted:

"Appearances are deceitful. It has been said here that this is not a cinder concrete meeting. If it isn't, what is it?"

"It ain't a Tammany Hall meeting, Mister," shouted a voice.

This was greeted with loud laughter, and Mr. Moore repled: "I congratulate the orator in the back of the hall for mentioning a name that every one understands."

This was met with redoubled hisses and hoots.

"Put him out!" shouted a dozen persons. A man in the middle of the hall arose and demanded that he be heard. Mr. Robinson refused to recognize him, and above the confusion that followed Mr. Moore was heard to shout: "There have been no arguments advanced so far. When some have been made I will be glad to answer them." Then he retired, and Patrick Gallagher, the contractor, who has been conducting an open-letter controversy with Acting Mayor McGowan for the last week, was introduced.

Mayor Asked to Veto Measure.

At the close of the remarks of Mr. Traitel, a man arose and said: "I want to know what is the object of this meeting? What were we called here for?"

Two policemen started in his direction, but Mr. Robinson shouted to them to let him alone.

"He will learn immediately what we are here for," shouted the Chairman.

Then George W. Brush of the Greater New York Taxpayers' Conference arose and presented this set of resolutions, which were read:

> Whereas, The Building Code which passed the Board of Aldermen on July 13 is defective, in that it
>
> First—Wantonly increases the cost of building, thus increasing rents with no compensating advantage;
>
> Second—Fails to provide proper publicity for rulings and interpretations of the Superintendent of Buildings, thus opening the way for the abuses by that office of the great discretionary power granted it by the charter.
>
> Third—Gives undue advantages to special interests, to the injury of the public at large, and eliminates certain fields of labor;
>
> Fourth—Fails to provide additional safety to suburban districts outside the fire limits, thereby violating the promise publicly made by the Aldermanic Committee to the citizens of Brooklyn.
>
> Fifth—Leaves no time before enforcement for the public to readjust itself to the new conditions; and
>
> Whereas, These defects and others were brought to the attention of the Committee on Buildings of the Board of Aldermen, and to the attention of each individual member of said board, in a report submitted to them prior to the passage of the code, which report was prepared by a joint committee consisting of representatives of the Greater New York Taxpayers' Conference, the Allied Real Estate Interests, New York Chapter American Institute of Architects, Brooklyn Chapter American Institute of Architects, New York Society of Architects, Association of Architectural Engineers, and Brooklyn League; therefore, be it
> Resolved, That this meeting, composed of citizens of New York in various walks of life, all of whom are vitally interested in having a proper Building Code, earnestly urges the Mayor to veto the code as passed by the Board of Aldermen.

Then Mr. Bedford arose from the floor to second them and said: "I believe that it is the intention of Mr. McGowan to sign this code. He usually does what McClellan would have done. I am heartily in favor of those resolutions, but I want to tell you that you are not going to get what you want. You're going to create a false issue for the fake reformers. That's what Tammany Hall wants. They want you to distract attention from the real issue—the Subway issue." He would have gone on, but he was ejected here, amid howls of protest.

Another man on the floor finally made himself heard, and moved that the Chairman appoint a committee of ten to wait on the Acting Mayor and express to him personally the sense of the meeting. At this point Mr. Moore stepped to the front of the platform again, while Mr. Robinson was still pounding loudly for order. He was again greeted with hisses, and a score of people shouted "Question! Question!" "He's out of order!"

Crowd Wouldn't Hear Moore.

As Mr. Moore started to speak, nearly every one in the hall arose, and the hisses were after a while drowned out by cries of "Bring that man back!" "Why did you let the cops throw him out?" Moore stood grimly smiling beside the Chairman's desk, while the latter shouted: "That man was removed contrary to my advice, and I would be glad to have him brought back." (Cheers.)

"Mr. Chairman," shouted Moore.

"S-s-s-s-s-s-s-s! Sit down!" shouted the crowd.

"Give him two minutes," pleaded Mr. Robinson.

"Mr. Chairman," repeated Moore.

"S-s-s-s-s-s-s-s!" replied the crowd.

"This compliment to my engineering ability—"

"S-s-s-s-s-s-s-s!"

"It sounds good for me to hear my work criticised by Alderman Downing, a man, who, in the committee meetings of the Board of Aldermen, says, 'I'll have to see Dady.'"

"Talk on the issue! You're out of order!" cried the crowd.

"I believed that this was an audience that was controlled by a spirit of fairness."

"No, Tammany Hall! Get the hook! Tiger-r-r-r-r!" hooted the crowd.

Then Mr. Moore gave it up and retired. The resolutions were passed with a shout of "Ayes!" that lasted for several seconds.

Mr. Traitel then stepped to the front of the platform and cried: "Will the Captain of Police tell me what has become of Mr. Bedford?"

The stolid, uniformed figure standing against a post in the centre aisle did not move or act as if he heard.

"He's in the station house!" shouted a voice.

Mr. Traitel then proposed the resolution condemning the action of the police in arresting Bedford.

Police Censured.

The crowd was still on its feet shouting at the police when Mr. Robinson realized that the officer was not a Captain but a Lieutenant, and continued: "Will the Lieutenant tell me what has become of that man?" No answer.

"Send his name to Gaynor!" cried a voice.

The meeting then adjourned.

Later the officer, who said that he was Lieut. Breen from the Fifth Street Station, delivered himself as follows: "Who is Robinson? Why should I answer him? I didn't come over here to make speeches. I'm the cop on the job, and I've seen Cooper Union meetings before.

The meeting was addressed by William Butler, counsel for the Building Trades Employers' Association; Prof. William H. Burr of Columbia; Alderman Downing, who is a Republican Alderman from Brooklyn, and a member of the minority of the Building Committee; Mr. Traitel, T. J. Taggert of the Metallic Lathers' Union, and Mr. Gallagher. All criticized the code severely, taking up particularly the restrictions placed upon the use of reinforced concrete, cinder concrete, fireproofing, and Rosendale cement. The discretionary powers granted to the Superintendent of Buildings were also condemned.

REALTY MAN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Louis Pulvermacher Ends His Life Following Business Reverses.

Apparently despondent because of business reverses, Louis Pulvermacher of 832 Dawson Street, the Bronx, a real estate dealer with an office at 271 West 125th Street, shot himself in the head on Monday night and was found dead in his office yesterday by a neighbor. Pulvermacher was married and had two daughters. Selma Pulvermacher, one of the daughters, said last night that some time ago her father became melancholy and said a week ago:

"I don't know what this is to come to. I can't stand it much longer."

Miss Pulvermacher said that was the only statement of her father's that would make it seem that he contemplated suicide, and his family believed that he would outlive his fit of melancholy.

WRIGHT SETS NEW AMERICAN RECORD

as the manoeuvres executed in midair. The aeroplane dived down from the 150-foot level at the south end of the field, but that stretch evidently was not to the liking of its driver. It rose sweepingly again and again, and came close to the ground at the north end. At this point Orville threw up the forward planes and the machine rose to a height of about fifty feet, soaring down the field and swooping again so close to the earth on its return that for a moment it was feared one of the planes would come in contact with the starting rail. It was apparent, however, that the aeroplane was under complete control, for with a slight lift into the air and a sharp swerve to the left, Orville shut off his engine, the machine touched the earth lightly, sprang again, and came to a full stop.

Could Have Crossed Channel.

"Yes, it was a pretty good flight," said Wilbur, unemotionally. "It established a new American record and was enough to have crossed the English Channel easily, had we been headed that way. The distance? Oh, a little over fifty miles, I expect. The circles were not uniform, and it is difficult to judge accurately. I think we were making forty or forty-one miles an hour."

A number of officers who are acquainted thoroughly with the course at the army post estimate the length of the circuit made by the aeroplane to be a good four-fifths of a mile. Taking this distance as correct, the time made by the machine is several miles better than forty an hour.

No plans have been made as yet for practicing with a passenger in preparation for the official trials which must be completed within the next eight days. It is not improbable, however, that Orville will take up either Lieut. Fouters or Lieut. Lahm to-morrow or Thursday. The brothers have been waiting for the engine to find itself, and it worked to perfection to-day.

A large gathering of distinguished persons saw the establishment of the new aerial record. Secretary of the Navy Meyer, Attorney General Hitchcock, and Senators Elkins and Kean rode to the army post in automobiles. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth was present again to-day. She has not missed a flight since the Wrights began to get their engine in shape.

LATHAM TO TRY AGAIN SOON.

PARIS, July 20.—Hubert Latham, who made an attempt to fly across the English Channel yesterday with his monoplane, but fell into the water, announced to-day that he expects to make another attempt on Friday.

Latham is now in Paris as the guest of the Parliamentary Aviation Commission.

McKee of Pittsburg, Penn., who took the match 6—4 and 6—1. Miss Helen Taft, who was drawn to meet Miss Lucy Blair of Chicago, did not contest, and forfeited the match by default.

NEW TUBES ALREADY OLD TO COMMUTERS

Jerseymen Rush Through Them and Back Home as if Used to Them for Years.

BRIEF TIE-UP LAST NIGHT

Balky Car Blocks Track for 14 Minutes —First Day's Traffic Good— Features of Terminal.

The first tie-up in the new McAdoo tunnels from Cortlandt Street to Jersey City occurred last night at 8:17 o'clock, when a car failed to negotiate a switch properly about 200 feet from the Manhattan platform and blocked the track completely.

Six cars are run to every train in the rush hours, and when the rush has passed the last car is dropped from all trains. The first five cars of the train which started for Jersey City at 8:17 were well filled, but the last car was kept empty so that it might be switched off. When the car reached the switch it was uncoupled and presently a motorman started to run it back onto the siding over the switch.

The forward trucks passed the switch safely, but the rear trucks continued on the main track, spreading the car over both sets of track in such a position that no car could pass. The trainmen notified Supt. E. T. Munger, who came from Jersey City and managed to get the car on the siding.

A delay of fourteen minutes was occasioned, however, and as the ticket sellers continued to issue tickets both at the Manhattan and Jersey City stations there were crowds on both platforms before the trains were got running on schedule again.

The first full day's traffic business in the new tubes was more than President McAdoo had expected, he said yesterday, though no official figures of the number of tickets sold were given out. The statistics will be compiled to-day.

A good many thousand Jerseyites who did not want to brave the crush following the formal opening of the tubes Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock made a more leisurely tour of inspection yesterday and swelled the business of the trains. Many of them simply wanted to ride under the river "to see how it goes," and then wander around in the big station and market place under the two huge Terminal Buildings, at Church and Cortlandt Streets.

Several hundred people came over in a body from Elizabeth, N. J. To that extent yesterday was Elizabeth day in the new tubes and the terminal station. Various other Jersey cities and towns that are interested in getting closer to Broadway are planning to make similar visits of inspection. Newark will have a day next week.

The company is more particularly interested just now, however, in the traffic that is to come and go daily. The best index of this yesterday was in the number of passengers who came over in the morning and went back late in the afternoon. Those rush-hour crowds met the expectations of the management, it was said. At those hours seven-car trains were run on a three-minute headway. The forty and odd seats in every car were filled, and there were numerous standees.

The traffic on the ferries to and from lower Manhattan and Jersey was cut into, of course. The tunnel company believes it will be cut into more and more as time goes on. It made allowance yesterday for some regular commuters who could not bring themselves to desert the dear old bug-shaped boats on which they have ridden so often to work and home again.

There were some, also, who chose to spend the ten or fifteen minutes extra time in making the trip rather than to give up the pleasant Summer boat ride across in the cool air. These nature lovers will take to the tubes in the Winter season, however, it was figured out.

The published time schedules were maintained in the tubes yesterday. From 6:43 A. M. until 9:22 A. M. the three-minute headway was maintained. For the rest of the morning and afternoon it was a five-minute headway, until 4:37 P. M., when the rush-hour headway was put on again, and maintained until 6:40. Then until 1 o'clock the five and three minute schedules were on again. After that until 4:30 A. M. trains ran every thirty minutes.

A circumstance generally remarked yesterday was the ease with which the daily trans-river travelers adapted themselves to the new way of travel. In the morning they rushed down to the station, into their trains, and rushed out again on the Manhattan side, seldom stopping to look at anything—just as if they had been using the new tunnel for years.

Indeed, the numerous and varied shops under the Cortlandt Street terminal will have to devise some way to check this rushing habit. Around the concourse, within easy distance of one another, are stores and shops, in which one can buy almost anything from a railway station ticket to a lawn mower.

It is the nearest thing to a department store downtown Manhattan has. But the mart wasn't very busy yesterday, and the daily trans-river Jersey travelers must be weaned away from the individual shops they have been patronizing if the terminal shops are to pay.

Other conveniences planned for the terminal station are a resting room for women and a room to which packages may be sent. Both will be of undoubted popularity with the wives, with nothing said about the Jersey husbands. A maid will be in attendance in the rest room, which is to be opened in a day or two. They who wish will be able to get a special cake of soap and towel for 5 cents, and there will be face powder and a big mirror in which the women may see if their hats are on straight.

Jersey wives coming in town to shop may have their bundles sent to the receiving room at the station, to be held until called for.

JUDGMENT AGAINST WAKELY.

For $15,175, Growing Out of Foreclosure Sale of His Saloon.

A deficiency judgment for $15,175 was docketed yesterday against James Wakely, the saloon keeper, in favor of James Everard's Breweries, growing out of the foreclosure sale of his interest in the leasehold of the property 755 Sixth Avenue, corner of Forty-third Street.

SUES FOR FALSE ARREST.

Contractor Held in Rosenheimer Murder Wants $50,000 Damages.

An echo of the murder of Julius T. Rosenheimer, Secretary of the London Needle Company, who was beaten to death by unknown men in the garden of his home, The Roses, at Pelham Manor, N. Y., on the night of June 18, 1907, came to the Supreme Court yesterday on a motion for a stay in the suit brought by Joseph P. Murray, a contractor, living at 233d Street and Kingsbridge Road, the Bronx, who seeks to recover $50,000 damages for false arrest and imprisonment in connecting him with the murder.

The defendants are George W. Ward, now County Judge and Surrogate of Herkimer County, N. Y.; ex-Police Capt. Price, then in command of the Bronx Precinct; James J. Long, Chief of Police of Little Falls, N. Y.; Rapphael Marks, Chief of Police of Pelham Manor, and William O'Neill, John Illiach, and James Weisenclanger, policemen.

Murray alleges that his arrest came from a letter sent to the District Attorney of Westchester County, the Chief of Police of Pelham, and the Coroner concerning the death of Mr. Rosenheimer. This was the letter:

> This will introduce to you the bearer, Mr. J. J. Long, Chief of Police of our city, Little Falls, N. Y., whom we are sending to you as the bearer of information which, judging from newspaper report, you ought to have in the above matter. I assure you we are not led to take this action because of any public reward, but because I feel that if such a crime occurred in our community I should expect and thank you for furnishing us such information as Mr. Long bears if you had it. The name of the party mentioned in the newspapers is sufficient to convince me that from my acquaintance with the gentleman and his mode of life that if this party was in your vicinity he either took part in the crime or arranged to have it done. I know this man, whose name the Chief will disclose to you, to be a thief and a burglar, carrying on his business under the guise of a contractor. He is a very smooth article, indeed. He usually has about him two or three burglars, whom he puts up to rob, and he does not hesitate to take part in the execution himself.

In his affidavit Murray alleges that Long delivered the letter and that he was arrested at his home at midnight on June 25, 1907, taken to the police station in the Bronx, and restrained of his liberty until the next morning. Then he was taken to Police Headquarters in Mulberry Street and subsequently discharged. Later he was taken to White Plains against his will.

BLAST KILLS SEVEN MEN.

Charge Explodes as It Is Being Tamped and Kills All Near It.

NEWTON, N. J., July 20.—Seven Hungarians and Italians were killed by the unexpected explosion of a blasting charge on the cut-off being built by the Lackawanna Railroad through the mountains near Blairstown. The charge was a heavy one, being tamped down. It went off, tearing loose several tons of rock, and killing all those who were near it.

One man, who was at work fifty yards away, was hurt by the flying fragments. He is in the company hospital. Only six bodies have been found. The seventh man was either blown to pieces or hurled into a thicket.

threes or bunches, but she wanted to see me alone."

Mr. Davis read from the assumed interview with Mrs. Parker, and asked the witness if he remembered making the statement. Adams said he could not remember making any such statement to Mrs. Parker.

The statements Mr. Davis credited the witness with having made to Mrs. Parker gave a somewhat different version of the tragedy to that which Adams has given on the witness stand.

Mr. Davis thereupon announced he was through cross-examining Adams for the present.

Major Leonard asked the witness a number of questions in regard to the interview with Mrs. Parker. Lieut. Adams caused a burst of merriment on the part of Mrs. Parker, her mother, and counsel, when he declared that Col. Doyen, senior officer, had told him Mrs. Parker was "a very shrewd-looking woman."

Lieut. Osterman's Story.

Lieut. Edward A. Osterman was called as the next witness.

"Where were you and what were you doing from 8 P. M. to 2 A. M. on Oct. 12 and 13, 1907?" was the first question Major Leonard asked the witness.

Starting with the hop at the Academy and the meeting with Sutton later, about midnight, at Carvel Hall Hotel, the witness told substantially the same story of the incidents of that night as told by Lieut. Adams.

"We were in a room at Carvel Hall about 12 o'clock," he said, "when Lieut. Sutton appeared at the door with a bottle of whisky in his hand and asked us to have a drink. We told him we were not drinking whiskey and he went away. About twenty minutes later he came back and said he had an automobile outside, and asked if we did not want to ride to camp. I don't think any one made an answer, but we all went out, and Lieuts. Adams, Utley, and Sutton, and myself got into an automobile and started for the camp."

From that point on Lieut. Osterman told of the fist fights with Sutton by Adams and himself, near the marine camp, and later running down to where the shots were fired he found Lieuts. Adams and Bevan standing near where Sutton and Lieut. Roelker lay on the ground.

"Some one said Sutton had killed Roelker and then killed himself," the witness said.

In answer to further questions by Major Leonard, Osterman said the reason he and his friends refused to take a drink with Sutton at Carvel Hall was because Sutton was not wanted in the party.

"He was unpopular with his classmates," the witness said. "Then, too, we had been drinking beer all day, and didn't want to drink whisky."

Sutton Shot Up the Camp.

Osterman told of an incident about a month prior to Sutton's death, when Sutton "shot up the camp."

"I was awakened by the bullets whizzing through our tent," said the witness, "and, stepping out into the camp street, saw Sutton standing in the door of his tent firing his revolver. Major Fuller came along, and asked Sutton to give him his revolvers, and he finally handed them to Major Fuller."

Asked about the threat which the witness said Sutton made that he would kill them all before sunrise, Lieut. Osterman said he believed at the time Sutton was likely to carry out the threat, and had suggested going to the guardhouse to get arms after they left Sutton. "Because I thought it was well to be prepared," he said.

"How long did it take you to get from where you heard the shots to the point where the altercation occurred?" inquired Major Leonard.

"About a minute."

"Who did you see there?"

"Lieuts. Adams, Bevan, Utley, Roelker, and Sutton."

"What did Adams do or say?"

"He showed me his finger and said Sutton had shot him. It was bleeding profusely."

The witness said Roelker was lying in the road and just picking himself up as he got there.

"It was pretty dark where the shooting occurred," the witness proceeded, "but you might be able to see a revolver fifteen yards away."

On cross-examination by Lawyer Davis Lieut. Osterman was asked about Miss Stewart of Pittsburg, the young woman with whom Sutton is said to have spent the evening prior to the shooting. Osterman admitted seeing Sutton and a young lady at Carvel Hall, but could not remember having been at their table.

"Something was said by Adams and Utley about going into a private room to have some beer," said Osterman, and in answer to further questions he admitted that the party had been cautioned twice to be quiet.

Sutton Quarrelsome, He Says.

Osterman insisted that no argument took place in the automobile on the way to camp until Lieut. Utley suggested that they had better get out and walk to camp. Then Lieut. Sutton said he would not get out, no matter what the others did, and turned to Adams, called him a coward, and said he could "beat hell out of him," according to the witness, who added:

"Adams jumped out, and, unloosening his coat, said that if Sutton was going to do any beating he had better do it right now."

Osterman said he knocked Sutton down at least three times in the fight they had on the way to camp, and the last time Sutton got up he started up the road and disappeared. Osterman, Adams, and Utley remained there for a few minutes discussing the possibility of Sutton carrying out his threat to shoot them all, and then went to the guardhouse to get some guns. They did not find any one at the guardhouse, and all three started for the barracks to report to the officer of the day, when Utley ordered Adams to go down to the scene of the fight and see if he could find any clothes. Soon after Adams started down the road Osterman and Utley heard the shots and ran to the scene of the shooting.

First Lieut. William F. Bevan, U. S. M. C., now attached to the U. S. S. New Jersey, was the next witness. The witness was officer of the guard on the night Sutton was shot. Major Leonard asked him to relate the incidents of the night of Oct. 12-13, from midnight on. In response Lieut. Bevan said:

"Some one reported to me about 1 o'clock that a fight was going on in the marine camp. I went up there, and found Lieut. Sutton in his tent door, with a revolver in each hand, pointing them at Lieut. Roelker's feet, who was remonstrating with Sutton and trying to get him to put up his guns. I placed Sutton under arrest and ordered both men to their tents.

How Sutton Was Shot.

"Sutton made some remark about disregarding arrest and ran down the walk, exclaiming he was going to leave the camp for good. Shortly afterward I heard several shots fired and Lieut. Utley and I ran down toward the parade grounds, where we saw several figures. There we found Lieut. Osterman and Sergt. De Hart sitting on Lieut. Sutton's body. Lieut. Adams was standing near by and trying to get at Sutton to hit him. Some one had pulled him away from Sutton and was holding him.

"I stooped down and took hold of Sutton by each shoulder, intending to hold him down on the ground so that he could not use the two revolvers he had when I last saw him. Some one said 'My God! He has killed Roelker,' and then I felt a movement under me and saw Sutton extend his arm from under him to the right of his head and shoot. Then his body relaxed.

"Lieut. Willing reached down and took the revolver out of Sutton's hand. It was a service revolver."

The court adjourned with Lieut. Bevan still under direct examination.

SEARCH FOR SUTTON WITNESS.

Ex-Lieut. Roelker Missing—Adams Blamed by Dead Officer's Friend.

WHEELING, West Va., July 20.—With the avowed purpose of locating Edward P. Roelker, the much-wanted witness in the Sutton inquiry, now being held in Annapolis, Harry B. Thomas of Martin's Ferry, Ohio, is in Wheeling to-day.

Thomas in a statment declared he had seen Roelker within the last two weeks, and was sure he could locate the missing ex-Lieutenant of the Marine Corps. Thomas says Roelker was recently employed in the Wheeling offices of a coal mining company, under an assumed name.

Much interest is being manifested as to the contents of a letter purporting to be from Miss Mary Elizabeth Stewart of Pittsburg, which Thomas says he will forward to the authorities at Annapolis. In the letter, so Thomas states, Miss Stewart outlines graphically the events on the night of Lieut. Sutton's death.

Thomas, who is said to be in business at Martin's Ferry, says he was Sutton's guest the day preceding the tragedy.

"I first met Sutton," said Thomas, "at Washington, having gone there to prepare for my examination for the United States Marine Corps. During the first week of our acquaintance Sutton showed me a letter from Adams challenging him to fight a duel with pistols. The night of the tragedy Adams and Sutton were in company at the hall in Annapolis, with two young ladies, one of them being Miss Stewart of Pittsburg.

"That evening I went over to Lieut. Sutton's quarters and was returning to the city when an automobile came up in front of the hall with Lieut. Sutton, Adams, and, I think, Utley.

"Without apparent warning Adams jumped from the machine and grappled with Sutton. A loud and angry argument followed. I could hear Sutton say he would not get into any mixup, but Adams and Sutton soon got into a fist fight, in which Sutton was worsted. They were finally parted by several persons standing by.

"Sutton then went to his room. I waited for him, and he and I walked to the gate. I called his attention to a cut from which blood was flowing down his cheek. He said he would get even for it, but he said very little to me regarding the real trouble except he spoke of Adams taking away his 'girl,' from which I regarded the trouble started.

"I returned to Washington that night, leaving Sutton at the street crossing of the interurban car line between Washington and Annapolis, near the Academy.

"I heard of Lieut. Sutton's death the next morning from the papers."

TIMELINESS OF INFORMATION

One of the most vital principles in modern business is that of Timeliness of Information.

Formerly a business house discovered only at the end of a year, or half year, that its current expense or its manufacturing costs had increased, or that its profits had fallen off. It was then necessary, the mischief having been done, to dig into the business of that period and attempt the difficult task of discovering where the fault lay.

The principle of timely data lays before the business man the facts in every department of his business, and their meaning, almost from day to day. He can not only check bad conditions before they have done serious harm, but he can generally nip bad tendencies in the bud.

We shall be glad to outline our services covering these points to the head of any business.

DEADLOCK ON TARIFF, PAYNE AIDING TAFT

placed on the Conference Committee regardless of the fact that he is the junior Republican member, said "lets vote." Mr. Payne protested with a vehemence that startled his associates. Some one said that the majority should rule. That remark, it is declared, came from one of the Senate members of the conference, and it incensed Mr. Payne still more.

Mr. Payne, it is said, told Mr. Aldrich that he could vote the Senate members of the conference if he chose, but that he could not vote the House members so easily. Full of wrath, he told his House colleagues that it was their duty to stand up for the House bill and to yield only after every possible effort had been made to win. He intimated that some of the House conferrees had been too ready to agree to increases made by the Senate. As a parting shot Mr. Payne is reported to have said that he would not sign a conference report merely because a majority of the House Republican conferrees had agreed to it, and then stalked angrily from the room.

The breach between Messrs. Payne and Fordney is said to have been patched up, but, as they are still in disagreement on the subject of lumber rates, it is likely to be reopened.

Senate Insurgents Meet.

The increasing evidence of differences among the regulars have not been unobserved among the insurgents of the Senate. There was a conference of an informal sort this morning to discuss the situation, and ten Republicans were present. Nine of them voted against the bill on its passage in the Senate. Mr. La Follette, whose insurgency is unquestioned, is out of town, and Mr. Borah, who is personally an insurgent on the corporation tax, took his place.

Mr. Cummins was strongly in favor of carrying the war into the enemy's country by issuing a statement and going in a body to the White House to demand the President's support for reductions on finished products. In view of the fact that the action of the conferrees was still more or less unknown to them in its details they decided to postpone definite action.

The President's recent outspoken stand for tariff reductions did not save him from criticism at the hands of the revisionists. Their position is that the President apparently is making his fight wholly for free raw materials, while it is duty on the finished product which comes closest to the ultimate consumer.

Of the ten insurgents who attended it is admitted that three, Brown, Burkett, and Crawford, will vote against the bill, the President having won them over with free raw materials. Mr. Beveridge, whose firmness had been questioned in certain quarters lately, was present, and it was confidently declared that while no one was certain that there would be a need of voting against the bill at the last he would go the limit with his friends.

The insistence of the President on free hides has apparently not driven the champions of a duty from their position. Senator Warren, who had announced his intention of voting against any report carrying free hides, was equally determined to-day. A report containing such a provision, he said, would be "unpleasantly" received by the Senate, and he for one does not believe any such report will be drafted. As for 7½ per cent. as a compromise, he said that would be unsatisfactory to both camps.

CLOTHIERS TO SEE TAFT.

Will Protest Against Continuation of the Dingley Woolen Schedule.

The special committee of the National Association of Clothiers, which was recently appointed to file a protest against the discrimination in the wool schedule of the Dingley bill as retained in the Payne-Aldrich bill, left for Washington yesterday afternoon. The committee will call upon President Taft, and explain to him the injurious effect to the consumer which has resulted from the discrimination in the Dingley bill against low-grade wool, and in favor of the high grades.

The members of the committee are as follows: Frank R. Chambers of Rogers, Peet & Co., New York; William Goldman of Cohen, Goldman & Co., New York; J. Kuppenheimer of Kuppenheimer & Co., Chicago; Siegmund B. Sonneborn of Henry Sonneborn & Co., Baltimore; David Kirschbaum of A. Kirschbaum & Co., Philadelphia; Louis E. Kirstein of the Stein-Bloch Company, Rochester; E. R. Smith of E. R. Smith & Co., Boston; Paul Feiss of Feiss & Sons, Cleveland, and William R. Corwine, Secretary of the association.

Before going the committee gave out a statement saying:

"Its members as practical manufacturers assert that the Dingley bill, in its operations since it became a law in 1897, has produced two results which react upon the wearer of ready-made clothing. One is that through the discriminations against low-grade wool, woolen cloths have depreciated in texture and decreased in weight; the other result is that that discrimination, operating against low-grade and in favor of high-grade wool, has caused conditions to arise which have enabled the manufacturers of worsteds and yarns to form a combination which controls the prices of woolen cloths, and to a large extent raw wool, practically dominating both markets.

MULDOON CONDEMNS COLLEGE ATHLETICS

Wonder Is That More Students Don't Collapse Under the Strain, Says the Trainer.

VIEWS ON YALE HEART TEST

Princeton Patriarch Against the Use of Oxygen—Break in Training the Greatest Danger.

William Muldoon, the athlete and trainer, who runs a rest home for overworked ment at White Plains, when asked yesterday what he thought of the experiments at Yale to determine the effect of college athletics on the heart, was not so much interested in the experiments as he was in the athletics.

"Athletics do no harm at all if conducted judiciously," he said, "but as they are conducted in the colleges now they certainly do the greatest damage. There is no question about it, they do great harm, and they do injure the hearts of young men.

"If they were conducted cautiously it would be all right. The athletic heart is no great evil. I failed to get life insurance nineteen years ago because they said I had it, and I am still alive and pretty capable. I am as well as any living man of my age, and my heart has stood as many exciting events.

"But the wonder to me has always been that so many college men stand athletics at all as they run them nowadays, not that some of them go to pieces.

"You say this Yale investigation was brought on by the fact that four men were overcome because of the strain on their hearts in two boat races with Harvard. The remarkable thing is that the rest of them stood it, and the only reason they can is that they are young and strong and the very pick of hundreds. They are forced into a tremendous overexertion—it is bound to leave its mark.

"The trouble is that they are brought to this great exertion too suddenly by far; they should come to it by a long and gradual process, and that is what judicious training largely is. That a great many more do not break down completely is extraordinary.

"I have always insisted that athletics were wrongly conducted in the colleges. It isn't only to the heart they do harm, but to the mind. That is enfeebled by withdrawing the vitality from it to the other parts of the body.

"'Athletics for merely physical reasons should never be given first place in the colleges; give them second or third or fourth, never first. The only trouble is that the colleges don't dare shut down on them. That's the long and short of it."

Dr. S. T. Stewart, one of the physical instructors at the Columbia Summer School, said that with the present care of preparation and careful examination employed in colleges, he thought that athletics did no harm.

"Of course," said he, "the athlete's heart gets bigger and stronger than the heart of the ordinary man, but it should be so. Now that the state of each athlete is considered individually, athletics are quite safe."

Danger of Breaking Training.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., July 20.—"The great danger, in fact the only danger, which we have to combat here is not the effects of athletics on the men while they are still in training, but when they get through college and abruptly break off the training of their college days," said Prof. C. V. P. Young, head of the Department of Physical Culture at Cornell University, when his attention was called to the statement in THE NEW YORK TIMES that Gymnasium Director Anderson of Yale had made important discoveries in regard to the effects of athletics on the heart.

Prof. Young has been in charge of Cornell athletics for a number of years, and has some complete records of the physical condition of the men. It has long been a rule at Cornell that no men can go out for an athletic team without first submitting to a rigid physical examination at the director's office. The slightest defect is noted, and the consent to participate in athletics is peremptorily refused. As a result a number of the promising candidates have been kept out of the various branches of sport on account of their physical condition.

"By this rule," said Prof. Young, "we are able to keep all but sound-bodied men out of the sports in the first place. By another rule which makes the examination cover only one term, we immediately detect physical infirmities that may have crept in, and then the man is debarred. Every athlete is examined twice a year.

"Consequently I don't think that athletics has ill effects on the hearts of the athletes while in college. As long as the training principles are sound, and I know that under Coach Courtney and Trainer Moakley the soundest principles are in vogue, we have nothing to fear from overtraining.

"Mr. Courtney, coach of the crew, has a proud boast that he has never had a man collapse in a boat, and that none but sound men row in his shells. He says he has the parents' responsibilities over athletes when they are working under him, and he is just as careful of their physical condition as their parents would be. Many a promising man has been kept out of rowing because of Mr. Courtney's strict rules.

"It is a cardinal principle of Trainer Jack Moakley that he would rather lose a track meet than enter a man whose physical condition is at all in doubt. When H. L. Trube, the mile indoor champion, and now running for the New York Athletic Club, was at Cornell, Moakley kept him out of distance running a whole year until he could grow up and become strong."

Prof. Young admitted that training does create what is known as an athlete's, or enlarged, heart. But this is not abnormal, he says, and is not at all dangerous.

"The great trouble with American athletics is that when men get through college they immediately break off training; it is an abrupt cessation. This is bound to react on the heart. If men would only keep up in a modified form what they did when out for teams there would be no difficulty."

Shouldn't Start Too Young.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 20.—In reference to the investigations which are being made by the athletic authorities at Yale regarding the effects of athletic sports on the hearts of athletes, George Goldie, who practically founded athletics at Princeton, and who is known as the patriarch of Tiger athletes, had some interesting statements to make to-day.

"The question as to whether or not men who engage in athletics while at college suffer injury to their hearts," said Mr. Goldie, "is one which has been thrashed out time and again. My opinion is that this question is decided before a man takes up athletics. If his heart is weak to begin with he cannot stand the strain.

"If a man goes into athletics in the right manner, with a good physical foundation, it cannot fail to benefit him. Investigations into the lives of Oxford, Cambridge, Harvard, and Yale oarsmen show that their longevity is greater than that of the average man.

"A great fault in the athletic system to-day which deserves much emphasis is that of introducing competitive athletics into preparatory schools, where the age of the participants is considerably below that of maturity. A boy should not be made to do a man's work. These systems tend to train down the athletes instead of developing them, and result in what is so often found in preparatory students who enter college—a muscular body with a weak heart. In my opinion, no boy under 17 should be allowed to compete in any distance run greater than 440 yards.

"In more than forty years' experience at Princeton no case of breakdown during a contest has come to my notice. It frequently happens that a man suffers a nervous breakdown, but this is invariably due to temperament. Such a case is said to be due to overtraining, and a man who suffers in this way should be given a rest by his coaches. The system of training in vogue at American colleges and universities is one which deals with each athlete individually, and when put into execution properly, as it generally is, athletes need have no fear of injury."

In reference to the use of oxygen during contests, Mr. Goldie said:

"Oxygen has not been employed long enough to show whether or not it has harmful results. Its use is not at present regarded favorably at Princton."

Mr. Goldie is one of the best-known old-time athletes in the country, and for five years, 1860-1865, he held the all-around Caledonian championship of the United States and Canada. He was one of the first 100 members of the New York Athletic Club. He is in good health, and is now almost 70 years of age.

967 Yale Heart Tests.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 20.—It became known to-night that the secret experiments which have been conducted at Yale for more than a year with reference to the action of the hearts of student athletes have been divided into two parts.

Dr. Frank J. Born, medical examiner for the university, has taken a total of 967 examinations, and the classification of the hearts of this number will form the basis of the report which is to be made this Fall, as far as it relates to athletics proper.

The result of advanced investigation made at the Yale gymnasium by Prof. William G. Anderson, the gymnasium director, has been placed in the hands of Prof. Russell H. Chittenden, director of the Sheffield Scientific School, for even more extended research before it is made public.

A separate report will be made of the trip undertaken up the volcanic mountains of Popocatapetl and Iztaccihuatl, in Old Mexico. This expedition was undertaken to show the effect of mountain climbing on the heart and the effect of the application of oxygen in cases of heart difficulty and exertion in high altitudes.

It is known that oxygen has been used by Yale athletes and its effects carefully noted by Dr. Anderson. It is also known that every candidate for the Yale crew was compelled to report to Dr. Born for a physical examination before he was allowed to row this Spring, and that several were rejected after the examination into the condition of their hearts.

HUNT FOR MISSING MILLIONS.

State Attorney Will Try to Recover Some of Third Avenue's $11,000,000.

Attorney General O'Malley, who came to New York on Monday to attend the opening of the McAdoo tunnels, took away with him when he departed yesterday the testimony before the Public Service Commission on the Third Avenue reorganization plan, so far as concerns the inability of Receiver Whitridge to find in the property evidences of the expenditure of about $11,000,000 out of the proceeds of the Third Avenue's consolidated mortgage bond issue of 1900.

It is understood that Mr. O'Malley will study the matter to determine whether any action can be undertaken on behalf of the State to recover some of this money. The $11,000,000 is supposed to have been spent in the electrification of the Third Avenue subsidiaries.

No such amount of electrification was done during the years when the proceeds of the bonds were spent, and the theory most generally proposed by those familiar with the course of traction affairs is that the money, after being advanced to the subsidiaries of the Third Avenue for supposed improvements, was taken back by the Metropolitan Street Railway as lessee of the Third Avenue and used to pay dividends and rentals.

Mr. Whitridge has said it would cost $200,000 to trace where the money went, and that he does not consider it his duty to do this.

TUG SINKS LIGHTER, ONE LIFE IS LOST

Crew Rescued Quickly, but the Assistant Engineer Is Dead When Hauled Out.

BOTH CAPTAINS ARRESTED

Harbor Craft Hurry to the Scene in Response to Signals of Distress.

Through a misunderstanding of signals, it was said, the steam lighter Martha Stevens of Trenton, N. J., was run into and sunk by the tug Confidence of the Morgan Line yesterday morning in the harbor off Robbins Reef. The lighter's crew of eleven, including Rebecca Johnson, the negro cook, were all saved, except Zachariah Logan, the assistant engineer, 62 years old. He died of apoplexy before he was taken out of the water. The cook's three-year-old daughter was among the rescued.

The steam lighter, in charge of Capt. George Foster, laden deep with wire from a Trenton plant, was bound across the bay from Staten Island to Bush's Stores, in South Brooklyn, when the tug Confidence, bound for Staten Island to take a tow, approached at a speed of fully 12 knots. According to Capt. Foster and the other members of the crew of the Martha Stevens, the skipper of the tug did not make any signals, but came on and struck the lighter on the port side abaft the engine room. The tug's bow cut a big hole through which water poured into the hold.

The dead weight of the wire cables, combined with the inrush of water, caused the lighter to keel over and sink in barely two minutes from the time of the collision. One of the deck hands described the accident thus:

"All I heard was a terrific crash, a grinding noise with a heaving motion, and I was in the water, going down feet first, with the suction of the old boat drawing me down."

All hands were fortunately on deck at the time, with the exception of Logan, who was off watch and lying asleep in his bunk. He was rescued by William Hickman, the engineer, who managed to get him out and raise his head above the water. With the aid of Capt. Foster he got him to the after part of the deckhouse, which was just awash. There they found that he was lifeless.

In the meantime the rescue of the other members of the crew had been effected promptly by the crew of the Confidence and the police boat Patrol, in charge of Capt. Mott of the Harbor Squad. The bow of the lighter was submerged in deep water, and her stern was resting on a ridge.

Capt. Mott lowered a boat and took Foster, Engineer Hickman, and the body of Logan off the deckhouse, while the others were taken on board the Confidence. The men did not seem any the worse for their unexpected bath, but the colored cook and her little girl were in a bad way, and it was only the prompt action of the men on the tug that saved the child's life.

The municipal ferryboat Gowanus, Capt. George Randolph, with 200 passengers on board, steamed alongside the wreck and lowered a boat with two men to go to the rescue of the crew of the lighter, but they were all picked up by the time the boat reached the wreck. Logan's body was transferred to the Confidence and landed at Stapleton, where it was viewed by the Coroner of Richmond County and sent to an undertaking establishment to await the inquest.

When the tug tied up at New Brighton later Capt. Pasch was arrested on the technical charge of manslaughter and locked up. He was afterward taken before Magistrate Handy at New Brighton and paroled in the custody of the Morgan Line officials to appear at the inquest. Capt. Foster of the sunken lighter was taken on the Patrol to Pier A, North River, and later arraigned before Magistrate O'Connor in the Tombs Court on a similar charge. He was remanded to Coroner Cahill of Staten Island.

FRESH CHARGES MADE AGAINST THE PLATTS

New Action Begun Concerning the Affairs of the United States Express Co.

JOBS FOUND FOR FAVORITES

Shareholder Alleges ex-Senator Created Places to Pay for Political Services.

New allegations against ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt and his sons, as managers of the United States Express Company, are made in papers placed yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Bischoff. An order was granted on them for the examination of the Platts and other officers of the company before the trial of a suit for an accounting and the appointment of a receiver.

These proceedings have been taken in an action brought by L. H. Newkirk, counsel for John J. Dudley, a shareholder in the company, who is suing for an accounting, independently of the action now before the courts of Montgomery County, brought by Benjamin F. Spraker.

The order issued yesterday directs the Platts and other Directors of the company to appear for examination on July 27 in Part II. of the Supreme Court, and to bring with them all the books and papers of the company bearing on the allegations made by the deponents.

These cover all the allegations of mismanagement brought in previous proceedings and open up new lines of inquiry on the connection of the ex-Senator, his son, Frank H. Platt, and his son-in-law, Chauncey H. Crosby, President, counsel, and Secretary, respectively, of the company, with the possible losses of profits.

One of the matters on which the ex-Senator is to be examined, is the "creation of positions in return for political or personal services or because of blood relationship." On this point, Mr. Dudley swears on information and belief, supported by the affidavit of Calvin Cone of Toledo, Ohio, for thirty-two years an employe of the company, that T. C. Platt in 1885 created the position of "Superintendent of Wagon Service Department" for G. W. Peterson, who had been of service to him at Albany.

New charges on which Mr. Dudley's lawyers are anxious to examine Frank H. Platt is his connection with the Century Express Company, which formerly did business in New York in United States Express territory. It took, according to the affidavit, a large proportion of profitable business away from the United States Express Company, although, it is charged, it was financed by officers of that company.

BLOOD KILLS GERMS
Good Blood Made by Good Food.
If one can surely turn food into good red blood it will combat and conquer disease more times than disease will win.
Any physician knows that good blood and plenty of it is the best germicide known and surely and safely cures disease when medicines fail.
One of the many illustrations is that of tuberculosis, which refuses to yield to medicine but must give way to good blood. A man from Philadelphia writes:
"I have been fighting tuberculosis for some years, and with a weak stomach was losing ground slowly every year. I had tried many kinds of medicine without relief, and finally got so that my stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels and lungs were affected.
My stomach would retain no food but peptonized milk and I was down to 90 lbs. in weight. The doctors said about two years ago that I had but a month or two to live.
About that time I was put on Grape-Nuts and cream. It agreed from the start and in a few days I began to feel increased strength, so I kept on, with the result that the healthy blood has driven the disease from every organ of my body except the lungs and is slowly driving it from them.
I have gained greatly in vitality and strength and added 29 lbs. to my weight. If I can keep on as I have been, it seems clear that I will get entirely well, thanks, to old Dame Nature whose work was made possible by Grape-Nuts food which I could digest." "There's a Reason."

METZ IS WILLING TO RUN FOR MAYOR

But He Thinks a Manhattan Man Is Wanted and Favors Justice Dowling.

TAMMANY UNJUSTLY BLAMED

For Things That Were Legacies from Low—New York Must Go Slow on Further Transit Development.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 20.—Herman A. Metz, who is at the Savoy, said to-day that he was reluctant to consider either the suggestion that he take the Controllership of New York again or that he allow his name to be used in connection with the Mayoralty nomination.

"I have neglected my European interests too long," he said. "I am devoting all my time to them now, and expect to be back in New York the 1st of September."

When the Mayoralty was mentioned Mr. Metz said:

"The man who declares that he would not be Mayor of New York if the place was offered to him is either a liar or a fool, but the next Mayor is going to have a hard time. A man who goes in on predictions and promises will fall down. He will find it next to impossible for him to make good. New York has got to stop for a while. City funds are not available for some of the purposes for which they are most greatly needed, such as the extension of rapid transit and other large improvements.

"Its capacity to borrow money can't be increased at present. There can be no raising of assessments until the outlying districts are further built up, and that again is dependent upon the development of the rapid transit system. The outlying districts will have to provide for their own public improvements hereafter, the money for which must come from the increased values of local properties."

Mr. Metz said that if Tammany would take him as a candidate totally untrammeled by political promises, he would accept the nomination, but he would not have that or any other nomination if it were subject to restrictions.

"I don't think," he added, "that Tammany will nominate a Brooklyn man. A man from Manhattan is wanted. Justice Dowling is the kind of candidate that in my opinion would have the best chance. Tammany will have hard enough work with the strongest man that can be named. As a matter of fact, there is no reason for the existing feeling. Tammany has no apologies to make for the present administration, which has been blamed for things over which it had no control, many of which, indeed, were a legacy from the administration of Mayor Low."

AMERICAN HANGED IN ENGLAND

William Hampton, Formerly of Michigan, Killed His Sweetheart.

BODMIN, England, July 20.—William Hampton, formerly of Ishpeming, Mich., was hanged at the Bodmin jail this morning for the murder of his sweetheart, Emily Tredres, at St. Erth, on May 2 last.

Miss Tredes had refused to have anything more to do with Hampton, whereupon he caught the girl around the neck and suffocated her.

Hampton submitted quietly to being bound and walked firmly to the scaffold. He did not utter a word after leaving his cell. Death was instantaneous.

MOORE SEES THE POPE.

Wants Him to Observe the Celebration at San Francisco.

ROME, July 20.—To-day was the sixth anniversary of the death of Pope Leo XIII., and a funeral mass was read at the Sacred College in the presence of Pope Pius and the high dignitaries of the Church.

The invited guests included Charles C. Moore, President of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Moore.

Mr. Moore expressed the opinion that the Pope should observe the festival at San Francisco in October in honor of the one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the discovery of the Golden Gate by Gaspar de Portola and the rebuilding of the city, by sending a message to Archbishop Riordan on that occasion.

Information concerning Mrs. Teele's mishap was refused to the police, but Dr. H. Lyons Hunt, a near-by physician, who was summoned to attend her, declared Mrs. Teele fell accidentally. Her husband is out of town and a telegram was sent to him last night, informing him of his wife's injury.

SIR ROBERT HART OUT.

Will Not Go Back to China to Take Charge of Customs.

LONDON, July 20.—Sir Robert Hart, who has spent a year's leave of absence in England, the first vacation he has taken in more than 20 years, has practically decided to retire from the position of Director General of Chinese Customs on account of ill-health.

Sir Robert Bredon, Sir Robert Hart's brother-in-law, who, as Deputy Inspector General, has been managing the Chinese customs during his superior's absence, has not the support of the British commercial bodies, and the British China Association within the last year has formally notified the British Government that it does not consider him the man for the place. It is considered likely here that a campaign will be made to supplant him.

HEEREN A SPANISH NOBLEMAN

Miss Wanamaker's Fiance Formerly a Banker in London.

PARIS, July 20.—The marriage of Miss Fernanda Wanamaker, the daughter of Rodman Wanamaker of Philadelphia and granddaughter of John Wanamaker, to Arthuro Heeren, the son of Count Heeren of Paris and Biarritz, whose engagement was announced last night, will take place early in the Autumn, and the couple will reside in Paris.

The Heerens belong to the Spanish nobility. M. Heeren was graduated from Eton, and for a time conducted a banking business in London. He is well known in society and a fine sportsman. He is a cross-country rider and has won several gentleman's steeplechases at Biarritz, where he is Master of the Hounds.

M. Heeren's sister is the wife of the Peruvian Minister at Paris.

SAVING A DOG LIFE SAVER.

Pasteur Institute Treating Sandow to Head Off Possible Rabies.

An unusual patient is under treatment at the Pasteur Institute, 361 West Twenty-third Street. Sandow, a large Newfoundland dog, is taken there daily and receives an injection of serum to ward off a possible attack of rabies. So far he has made good progress, and takes his treatment with a good deal more philosophy than a human being. Yesterday afternoon as he was leaving the institute after receiving three times as strong a hypodermic injection as a man he was skipping about like a puppy and tugging at the whip his boy custodian held in his hand.

Sandow is a dog of note. He belongs to Harry J. Pegorsch, one of the life savers at Manhattan Beach, and has himself a record of rescues. Seventeen persons pulled from the water just in time is the number vouched for, and when he is not engaged in such serious business, he has made himself popular on the beach. He plays gently with the children on the sands and fetches sticks for any one who throws them into the surf, and then, as the cry for help goes up, dashes into the water, swims to the drowning bather, and seizing him gently by the leg or arm, pulls him ashore without marking him with his teeth.

About a week ago a mongrel found his way to Sandow's domain. He sought to drive it off, but before he succeeded the cur had bitten him slightly. The cur seemed to be rabid and was shot. Pegorsch was filled with fear for Sandow. He borrowed an automobile and took him to the Pasteur Institute. There Dr. W. L. Wheeler took his case. An autopsy on the mongrel proved without doubt that he was tainted with rabies, and it was decided that Sandow must undergo the same kind of treatment as a human patient.

ARGENTINA RECALLS ENVOY.

Also Orders Bolivian Minister to Leave Buenos Ayres at Once.

BUENOS AYRES, July 20.—The Argentine Government has sent his passports to the Bolivian Minister here, ordering him to leave Buenos Ayres within twenty-four hours. The Government has also telegraphed to Señor Fonseca, Argentine Minister to Bolivia, to leave La Paz immediately. The action of the Argentine Government follows the refusal of Bolivia to accept the decision of Argentina in the matter of the boundary dispute between Bolivia and Peru.

The Bolivian Minister advised the Argentine Government to-day that Bolivia had decided to submit to Parliament for consideration the arbitral award rendered by President Alcorta, which in itself was considered sufficient reason for breaking off relations.

In addition, however, the Argentine Republic has taken offense at the action of the President of Bolivia, who, it is asserted, has sent circulars to the Prefects throughout the country casting reflections on the Argentine Government.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, July 20.—Two thousand Bolivians have petitioned the Government that they be enrolled in the army. They offer their unconditional support to the cause in case of an international conflict. Large numbers of Peruvian and Argentine residents continue to leave Bolivia at the cost of their respective Governments.

AMERICA TO HAVE MORE RARE PICTURES

Art Dealer's Purchases Abroad Exceed Those of Former Years by Many Thousand Pounds.

WAITING ON TARIFF BILL

Blakeslee Says J. P. Morgan Will Bring Over Famous Pictures for Metropolitan Museum When Duty Is Removed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 20.—T. J. Blakeslee, the New York art dealer, who has been in Europe since May buying pictures, says he has excelled all his former yearly purchases by many thousand pounds. This is for two reasons, first, his confidence in the returning prosperity of America, and, second, his expectation that duties on works of art will be wholly abolished under the new tariff.

Among Mr. Blakeslee's purchases is a celebrated Rubens which belonged to Lord Ashburton, whose collection was bought about a year ago by a syndicate of dealers, including Agnew, Wertheimer, and Sully, who are said to have paid £200,000 for it. A more conservative guess, however, is that it cost about £160,000. The Rubens Mr. Blakeslee secured represents "Diana and Her Nymphs." It has been valued at about £20,000. He preferred it to another Rubens offered to him, called "The Lion Hunt," on which an equal value was placed. He also bought a Turner in the artist's latest manner, of which he says £10,000 would be a fair appraisal, and several Romneys and Reynoldses.

"All my important purchases, representing a very large sum of money," said Mr. Blakeslee, "I shall leave here in storage until the Tariff bill is settled and operative. Many American dealers who have been in Europe this season are going to do the same. Although I was on the Continent ten days, I made nearly all my acquisitions in London, which is unquestionably the best place in the world for this purpose. It is the common centre toward which most rare things that are for sale gravitate sooner or later.

"American collectors are awaiting the enactment of the new tariff quite as eagerly as the dealers. I was with J. Pierpont Morgan in his house at Princess Gate just before he sailed. My impression is that he will take over a great many of his finest works of art as soon as the Tariff bill becomes operative. He did not say this to me in so many words, but I could discern what was going on in his mind on the subject.

"I think he will deposit in the Metropolitan Museum his great pictures, such as the "Duchess of Devonshire," by Gainsborough, for which he paid £20,000; a portrait by Reynolds, £25,000; the "Dutch Burgomaster," by Rembrandt, £40,000; "Lady Hamilton," by Romney, and his superb Turner."

Mr. and Mrs. Blakeslee will probably return to New York within the next fortnight.

BIG CLASSES AT COLUMBIA.

All Records of Attendance at the Summer School Are Broken.

Breaking all records in this country for Summer attendance, according to the University authorities, about 2,000 students have matriculated for the Summer session at Columbia. Of the total matriculation 1,930 are up on Morningside Heights and twenty-one are at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. The students have come from nearly every State and Territory in the Union, from Canada and Nova Scotia and other foreign countries. Almost all professions are represented, and a larger number than usual have matriculated in the university.

The increase over last year, about 400, is attributed to several causes. One is that under the new regulations it is possible for men and women to get the university degrees in a shorter time, four Summer sessions, or two Summer sessions and one regular term being all that is necessary to accomplish the result, and hundreds are taking advantage of the opportunity.

CIRCUS TENT FOR CHILDREN.

Pastor of St. Anselm's Church Provides Novel Shelter for His Charges.

A tent almost as big as that used by a Wild West show has been put up in the playground of the parochial school attached to St. Anselm's Church, Tinton Avenue and 155th Street, the Bronx, by the Rev. Bernard Kosterhoven, the pastor. It is for the benefit of the children of the neighborhood, whom it is expected to attract away from the streets. Several loads of sand have been dumped in the tent for the children to dig in.

A lawn party will be held to-night and every Wednesday night for the next five or six weeks at the church to raise funds for the school.

RARE DISEASE FOUND HERE.

Pellagra, Similar to Leprosy, Attacks Dunning, Ill., Insane Patients.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Pellagra, a disease similar to leprosy and usually found only in Northern Italy, Spain, France, and other parts of Europe, has been discovered among inmates of the insane wards at the Dunning Asylum.

Three middle-aged women are now suffering with the malady, and six other women have succumbed to the disease within the last year. At the time of their death Dunning physicians were mystified as to the nature of their ailments.

A suspicion that the disease was pellagra was confirmed yesterday by Dr. C. N. Lavinder, a surgeon of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, who for the last two years has been making an exhaustive study of the disease at a laboratory at Columbia, S. C.

"Pellagra is one of the most mysterious diseases known to science," said Dr. Lavinder. "Its cause is not entirely understood and no certain cure has been found for it.

"Most authorities attribute the disease to the use as food of spoiled or damaged corn or its products. But no one is able to state what corn in a certain condition will cause the disease nor can any one guard against it. Its victims become depressed and morose and quickly go insane.

"The disease is not considered communicable, and no effort is made anywhere, either in Europe or in the United States, to quarantine the cases."

YOUTH SAVES DROWNING BOY.

Dives Off a Pier and Hauls Him Out Against the Tide.

Hundreds of persons on the Houston Street ferryboats and other East River craft witnessed the thrilling rescue from drowning last night off the North First Street Dock in Williamsburg of John Heissenbuttel, 6 years old, of 19 Ten Eyck Street. The boy who rescued him and nearly lost his own life was 16-year-old Hugh Martin of 21 Hope Street.

Heissenbuttel and his 9-year-old brother, Charles, went down to the North First Street Dock without the knowledge of their mother to play. While the younger boy was at the end of the pier watching the strong ebb tide going out another boy, whose identity could not be established, pushed him into the water and then ran away.

His brother tried in vain to save him by climbing down from the pier. Meanwhile the drowning boy had been carried some distance by the tide, and then sank below the surface, only to reappear again for a moment and sink out of sight again.

By that time Martin, who had been in bathing and was dressing himself on another part of the dock, heard shouts, and on learning that a boy was drowning he jumped into the river and waited for Heissenbuttel to rise to the surface again. As the boy came up Martin seized him, but Heissenbuttel got a grip on his shirt and held on. The tide was bearing both away, but Martin managed to free himself, and then getting a grip on the back of Heissenbuttel's neck with one hand, he swam toward the dock against the strong tide.

By this time hundreds of persons were watching the rescue from river craft. Martin, thoroughly exhausted, managed to push the unconscious boy against a rock and held him there until some men put out in a boat and rescued both.

Ambulance Surgeon Keyes of the Eastern District Hospital worked over Heissenbuttel for more than an hour before he resuscitated him, and then took him to the hospital.

BOY STILL SAVING LIVES.

Durkin Will Make It His Business—Rescued an 8-Year-Old Yesterday.

Jimmy Durkin of 461 West Twenty-sixth Street, an athletic 12-year-old boy, who is said to be the best diver and swimmer of his age along the water front, and who has saved the lives of several boys in the last few years, saved another yesterday afternoon, when he dived into the Hudson off West Twenty-eighth Street and rescued John Bailey of 557 West Twenty-ninth Street, who had slipped from a raft of drift logs.

Jimmy Durkin has been a fine swimmer since he became 5 years of age. Three years ago he rescued a boy from drowning off West Fourteenth Street. He says he means to be a United States life saver when he grows up.

PRIZES FOR ARCHITECTS.

Society of Beaux Arts Awards Annual French Scholarship.

The Society of Beaux Arts Architects met at their rooms, 36 East Twenty-second Street, yesterday to make the final award for the Paris Prize of this year. This prize entitles a pupil who is sent abroad for three years to enter the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris without examination.

The society has sent abroad five young men, who have won many of the prizes offered in France. The prize is open to all Americans, independent of their connection with any society or college. These were the awards: M. J. Sclavoni, pupil of Mr. Prevot, first prize; A. F. Adams, pupil of Mr. Corbett, second prize, and H. D. Hughes, pupil of Mr. Hornbostl, third prize.

A public exhibition of the drawings will be held for the rest of the week at 36 East Twenty-second Street, from 9 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening.

Does your skin dry, harden, roughen and crack when you venture out of doors in cold weather?

The trouble may be due to any one of several causes—wind; exposure of the face and hands after bathing them in warm water; or the use of a soap which is not properly made.

In any event, you should use Ivory Soap. Made of pure vegetable oils and containing no "free" (uncombined) alkali, it not only cleanses the skin, but it helps to keep it smooth, soft and healthy—in winter as well as in summer.

Money will not buy purer soap than Ivory. Many toilet soaps which find a ready sale at 15, 25 or even 50 cents a cake are not so pure.

Personal Railroad Service

Locomotives, cars, tracks, signals and operating efficiency make the "train service" which is vitally necessary to your railroad journey.

Less vital but perhaps more closely identified with your comfort are those things which indicate the hospitality of the railroad which you patronize.

An official of the New York Central Lines once said to a ticket agent who felt that an inquirer at the desk had asked some unnecessary questions: "Give all the help in your power to the public. Map out the inquirer's trip for him—answer any question he asks. If he wants tickets and sleeping-car accommodations, and can't come after them, send them to him. If you can't route him over our line, send out to your competitor and get his tickets for him—this is not the only trip he will ever make."

The trainmen have the same kind of instructions.

Call at any of our ticket offices or write or telephone about any trip anywhere any time. We are the recipients of the favor—not you.

STEEL STRIKERS FAIL TO GET COURT'S AID

Their Plea for Injunction to Keep Mills from Starting with Strikebreakers Denied.

MORE RIOTING NOW FEARED

Company Determined to Open Its Plant at Any Cost—Butler Strikers Back to Work To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, July 20.—Judges Brown and Ford in the Allegheny County Court this afternoon declined to interfere in the strike at the Pressed Steel Car Works, where 5,000 men are out. The suit in equity had been brought by the Public Defense Association to restrain the strikers from violence and the employers from trying to start the mills with strike breakers. The decision of the court was that it had no jurisdiction. Judge Brown in announcing the decision said in part:

"Much as we regret conditions that are now prevailing at McKees Rocks, this court cannot force men to work for any corporation or firm. Neither can it compel a corporation to employ certain men nor to take them back after they have been discharged. This court has no authority to pass upon wage rates, and all the issues raised in this bill are beyond the jurisdiction of the court, except one.

"The one exception is that of the right of a taxpayer to file an injunction suit in regard to strike conditions. This, however, applies only in regard to restraining violence, but not in regard to the relations of an employer to an employe."

This is considered a complete victory for the employers. The Pressed Steel Car Company had demurred to the petition for injunction and the demurrer was upheld. On the other hand, the strikers had joined in the demands of the Defense Association that the court force arbitration upon the company. It is now understood that an effort will be made in earnest to start the mills at McKees Rocks. President Frank N. Hoffstot said to-night that the company was losing a great amount of money daily and could not afford to stand for the strike much longer.

It is understood that the company will give the employes until to-morrow to return to work, hoping that the dissatisfied may be influenced by the court's decision to-day.

After that the company is ready to start the mills with strike breakers let the cost be what it may.

When the men heard late to-day that they had lost their standing in court and again were facing the company only, without an arbitration council in sight, ugly rumors were circulated as to what the car company officials might expect from now on in the way of rioting and general disorder. Fewer men were at work to-day in the car plant than yesterday.

Something of a sensation was occasioned here to-day by a statement issued by the Rev. Father A. F. Toner, pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church of McKees Rocks, who has been in charge there for nineteen years.

The clergyman refers to the Pressed Steel Car plant as "a place where men are robbed and slaughtered, all to obtain or retain positions that barely keep starvation from the door."

Further along in his statement Father Toner refers to the works as "a pit of infamy, where the men are driven lower than the degradation of slaves."

L. B. Stillwell, Consulting Electrical Engineer for the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company, when asked yesterday concerning a report from Pittsburg that 150 men sent from New York by his concern were having difficulties with the striking employes of the Pressed Steel Car Company at McKees Rocks, said:

"These men were not sent to the works of the Steel Car Company subsequent to the declaration of the strike, but had been at work at McKees Rocks for several weeks previous to that time. They are employed solely in mounting electrical equipment upon the steel passenger cars which the Pressed Steel Car Company is constructing for the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company. These men are in my employ, and not in that of the Pressed Steel Car Company."

STANDARD CAR STRIKE ENDS.

3,500 Men to Go Back to Work at Butler Shops—Out Four Days.

BUTLER, Penn., July 20.—The strike which had tied up the Standard Steel Car Company's works for four days was settled late to-day, and the 3,500 employes of the plant will return to work to-morrow morning. The settlement is a partial victory for both sides, each yielding points in an effort to reach an understanding.

The strike was brought to an end through the efforts of the Rev. Father F. Beczewski of the Polish Catholic Church here, under whose advice the men have been acting almost from the beginning. Following the presentation of an ultimatum by the men to-day, Attorney Levi M. Wise and Father Beczewski were called into consultation with company officials. The latter agreed to take back all of the workmen and consented to a reduction of the percentage of delinquent rents taken from the pay envelopes of the men each week.

Father Beczewski, acting for the strikers, then agreed to abandon the demand for an increase in wages, consenting to the company's statement that it would follow its usual custom in such matters. An agreement was drawn up, which was ratified by the strikers at a mass meeting held on the commons this evening.

Following the announcement of the settlement of the strike it was agreed that the twenty-three in jail in connection with the labor troubles be released immediately on a nominal bail.

HURT IN STRIKE RIOT.

Tin Mill Strikebreakers Attacked on Way to Work—Two in Jail.

NEWCASTLE, Penn., July 20.—An attempt to conduct 125 strikebreakers through the city on their way to the tin mills caused a riot late this afternoon, during which one man was seriously injured and scores of others beaten and bruised. As a result of the disturbance Harry Ringer and James Warren are in jail, charged with attempting to incite riot.

The men, both of whom are said to live in Cleveland, were leaders among the new employes. They arrived in Newcastle this afternoon and marched down the street shouting defiance at the strikers. The entire party, accompanied by seven special policemen, were attacked by crowds on the sidewalks.

Eight of the alleged strikebreakers and all of the special policemen were arrested by city police. No strikers were arrested. Searched at the station the prisoners are said to have been armed with knives and revolvers.

HARD RUN FOR AUTOISTS.

Glidden Tourists in Sticky Going from Mankato to Fort Dodge.

FORT DODGE, Iowa, July 20.—To-day's run of 138.6 miles from Mankato, Minn., of the Glidden tourists, while one of the shortest runs on the route, was one of the hardest on account of the character of the soil, which makes good corn, but bad roads when there has been an overabundance of rain. While the cars were jumped about considerably and their passengers were shaken up, the damage due to the day's run was small. One of the drivers gave a good definition of the roads by saying they were divided into "gumbo, jumpo, and bumpo," representing soil, culverts, and ruts.

Every place along the route to-day was en fête for the occasion, and every farm gate had its group and every cross road its crowd, while multitudes were to be found in each village and town.

Only two penalties were assessed to-night on to-day's run. Maxwell car No. 107, Hower trophy, was penalized 1.6 for repairing a water leak in the first cylinder. Midland Car No. 12 was penalized 0.6 for repairing a fender.

The Chalmers-Detroit "Blue Bird" No. 3 was not reported in on time. It was ditched at Winnebago City to save a pair of lovers who, with locked arms, were crossing a street as the car rounded a corner. The car was not wrecked.

E. M. & F. No. 97, the pilot car, sustained a broken rear wheel the other side of Garden City, but quickly made repairs.

Secretary and Starter Ferguson had his hand badly lacerated and bones broken this afternoon by being thrown against a barbed wire fence while going over a culvert.

AUTO ENTRIES COMING FAST.

Brighton Beach Events Will Close as Soon as Limit Is Reached.

Announcement was made yesterday by A. B. Cordner, Chairman of the Brighton Beach Committee of the Motor Racing Association, that entries for the two days' speed tournament on the Brighton Beach Motordrome, July 30 and 31, will close as the various lists become filled. Officially, entries do not close until noon on July 26, but the demand for entry blanks has been so great and nominations for the six events on the card are coming in so rapidly that the committee has decided to close each event when they consider that they have received all the entries that safely will permit to be started on the track, which is sixteen.

The officials were selected yesterday, and are as follows: Referee, Samuel B. Stevens; Judges, A. R. Pardington, A. A. A.; Coker F. Clarkson, A. L. A. M., and Alfred Reeves, A. M. C. M. A. Umpires, W. R. Teaboldt and A. H. Whiting. Paddock Judges, Peter Fogarty, E. T. Birdsall, Walter R. Lee, and Edward F. Flammer. Patrol Judges, E. Broadwell and L. Rockwell. Timers, S. M. Butler, P. A. Sayles, A. L. McMurtry, George McGraham, Prosper Clust, and Charles J. Dieges. Starter and Clerk of Course, Fred J. Wagner. Assistant Clerks of Course, Arthur Warren and Jay Cothran.

The committee to pass upon the qualifications of drivers will be Joe Tracy, Chairman; Guy Vaughn, and Arthur Campbell, all race drivers of experience. Dr. George W. Bogart will be chief of the medical staff, and will have five assistants on the course, besides a corp of nurses.

JACK ATKIN BACK TO WINNING FORM

Sprinting Champion, with Top Weight Up, Romps in First in a Fast Race.

SPOONER WINS PULLED UP

In the best class field of the Yonkers meeting yesterday the sprinting champion, Jack Atkin, returned to racing, with a singularly impressive victory for the Fleetwing Handicap. The Missouri-bred horse, after a long rest, probably the longest he has had since he began his career as an early two-year-old, was the top weight for the Fleetwing, and in spite of doubts as to his condition, started as favorite in a select field of smart sprinters, with Rialto and August Belmont's Half Sovereign the next choices. The track still was dull from the recent rain, but the going had no effect on Jack Atkin's speed.

There was a period of hardly more than a second in the running of the race when Jack Atkin was not out in front with his 130 pounds. Pantoufle broke in the lead, with the others well abreast following, and in half a dozen strides Jack Atkin raced past Pantoufle and settled down as pacemaker. Half Sovereign raced past Pantoufle in the run down the back stretch, and on the far turn Rialto and Arondack moved after the leaders, but got no nearer Jack Atkin than they were at the beginning of the turn. From the head of the stretch to the winning post Jack Atkin braced against the bit and, striding on alone in front, won easily in the fastest race of the meeting, after having run the fastest first half mile ever run on the track, winning easily and going away from his field by three lengths. Half Sovereign was second, three lengths in front of Arondack, which got up close on the post to snatch third place from Rialto. The time for the six furlongs of the race was 1:12, the early fractions being 0:12, 0:23, 0:34 2-5, and 0:46 3-5.

It was an off day for the Western horses, none of the newcomers being successful in the course of the day, while the one triumph at long odds was earned for the Virginia turfmen by Superstition, which, racing into the lead early in the closing race, held his place there to the end and won rather easily by two lengths from the Western horse Belleview and the odds-on favorite Beauclere, which fought it out in the order named, a nose apart, for second and third money.

Spooner, which has been long in returning to good form, made most of the running in the selling sprint and won, pulled up, from Osorine, the favorite, in a big field. The summaries:

Savage Knocks Out Rowan.

Jim Savage of Orange, N. J., knocked out Jack Rowan, also of New Jersey, in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout last night at Brown's Athletic Club, West Twenty-third Street. Rowan was utterly outclassed and went down six times in the round, going to the floor once to escape one of Savage's right blows to the jaw. The last time Rowan went to the floor from a hard right to the jaw, and after being counted out had to be assisted from the ring. The chief bout in the preliminary events was between Frank E. Mango and Tony Moran, the latter having the better of it in a six-round bout.

Belmont Cricketers Beat Zingaris.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—The Belmont Cricket eleven defeated the Toronto Zingari cricketers in the second inning of the match to-day at Elmwood without the loss of a wicket by the score of 225 to 224. The first innings closed yesterday with the score 171 to 51 in favor of Belmont. The Canadians followed on this morning and made 173 runs in their second inning. King and Walter Graham, who went to bat for Belmont in the second inning, made the necessary 54 runs without losing a wicket.

Langford Wants $10,000 to Fight.

BOSTON, Mass., July 20.—Joe Woodman, manager of the colored fighter, Sam Langford, denied to-night the report coming from San Francisco that he had accepted the terms of the Ely (Nev.) Club for a match between Langford and Stanley Ketchel. Langford was offered $5,000 of a $25,000 purse, but Manager Woodman declares he must get $10,000 for Langford's end, with $1,500 for training expenses, two round trip tickets, and one-third interest in the moving pictures before he will agree to the match. Woodman says he is considering offers from clubs in Pittsburg or Philadelphia and New York for the match.

GREAT NECK WINS AT POLO.

Long Island Team Defeats Rumson Second by 11 Goals to 5½.

Special to The New York Times.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 20.—Despite the handicap of four goals the Great Neck second team defeated Rumson second to-day in the third game of the series of the Rumson polo tournament by the score of 11 goals to 5½. The competition was for the Rumson Challenge Cup, and despite the one-sided score, produced an interesting contest. C. P. Beadleston was unable to play, owing to illness, and W. Strothers Jones, Jr., of the Rumson team was substituted. This change reduced the handicap of the Great Neck team from 9 to 8 goals, while the Rumson second quartet, with four goals, had a big advantage from the start.

The visitors from Long Island played a hard aggressive game, and scored freely from the start. The referee, W. G. Loew, was not called upon to inflict many penalties, Everett L. Crawford being the only player to violate the rules, for which his team was penalized half a goal. W. Strothers Jones, Jr., played an exceptional game, using his mallet to advantage and riding off his opponents very effectively. Malcolm Stevenson also appeared ot advantage, his work adding materially to the winner's score.

Before the game was half played the visitors had secured a commanding lead over the Rumson four, and by excellent team work and passing continued to add to their total.

The victory of the Great Neck team leaves three clubs to contest the semi-final and final round. The former will be played to-day between the Rumson Freebooters and first teams. The former aggregation receives one goal by handicap, and one of the best matches of the tournament should be witnessed. The line-up and summary:

GREAT NECK 2D.		RUMSON SECOND.

Goals Earned—Great Neck, 15; Rumson, 2. Allowed by Handicap—Rumson, 4. Lost by Penalty—E. L. Crawford, Rumson, ½. Net Score—Great Neck, 11; Rumson, 5½. Referee—W. Goadby Loew.

CORPORATION TAX CHANGES.

Mr. TAFT'S corporation tax has come out of the repair shop with two significant amendments. The rate of tax is halved, which is a confession that the motive of the bill is not primarily financial. This suggestion is confirmed by the fact that while the Treasury's need of money is so immediate and pressing that it is proposed to authorize a loan of $397,000,000, the receipts from the tax are postponed necessarily for many months. The bill does not because it cannot make one dollar of this tax payable before June, 1910. The demonstration is complete that the intention is to discriminate against corporations, and rather for regulation than for income. If the purpose is good—which is taking too much for granted—the method of procedure is irregular and objectionable. The matter is important enough to be dealt with separately, on its specific merits, and not associated with anything so irrelevant as the tariff, which also should be treated by itself, the more particularly since the session was called for that object alone.

The second amendment exempts holding companies from the bill. Why? In his Paducah address Mr. WICKERSHAM, the draughtsman of the bill, said:

> The device of the holding corporation is the only thing which has made possible the rapid growth of the great trusts and monopolies, and a prohibition such as that stated would go far toward their destruction.

The stated prohibition is the withholding of a license to do business within a State if more than 50 per cent. of any corporation's stock is owned by another corporation. And now the proposer of this drastic prohibition comes forward with a proposal to exempt these obnoxious corporations from Federal taxation. If it is desired to get control of the little corporations, is it not more desirable to get powers of espionage over the holding companies? How is this favoritism to be explained or excused to those favoring the corporation tax because obnoxious to the great trusts and monopolies?

It is said with appearance of authority that Mr. TAFT thinks holding companies should be exempt because it is double taxation to tax the shares which represent other shares which have already paid the same tax. This is unasked and unappreciated tenderness. Corporations are so used to double, triple, and manifold taxation that they do not particularly object to this tax's amount. This is well expressed by a memorial from cotton manufacturers representing 10,000 stockholders in a single mill town. They say that any Federal tax upon corporations is unfair because:

> The property of stockholders in corporations is already subject to various forms of taxation. Real estate and machinery are locally taxed, a franchise tax covering property not locally taxable is gathered by the State; a personal property tax is levied upon stockholders not residents in the domicile of the corporation, and there are inheritance taxes in many States. Federal taxation, in addition to the above, would create a serious impairment of the value of properties held and paid for without any anticipation of such procedure.

This tax is offensive because of what it omits as well as what it includes. The State taxation is erratic, but the Federal tax is levied without any corresponding compensation. The National tax is levied whether or not the State tax is levied, or in what amount it is levied. The cotton trade's protest is all the more feeling because one of the biggest manufacturers in that trade in this or any country is an individual, whose competition is now made unfair by act of Government—and so in many cases in many trades. The taxation of insurance companies is a tax on their policy holders. The tax on banks is a tax on those whom they accommodate, and also an unjust tax on bank shareholders, in that it compels a tax on deposits in excess of the bank's capital. The tax on building companies, whether structural or financial, is serious, since their capital is only the margin on which they trade, and their outstanding mortgages may be much more than the capital which alone they are entitled to deduct in the calculation of net earnings.

The situation has changed since this tax was introduced. Originally it was compensation for unwelcome increase of tariff duties, and a substitute for an income tax. Mr. TAFT felt called upon to save something from the wreck of the Republican policy. But he is now having unexpected success with his pressure upon the standpatters, and the "high and higher" protectionists. The motive for the corporation tax is therefore lessened, and Mr. TAFT can hardly have escaped noticing that the popular reception of his new idea is not what he anticipated. Always there is objection to any tax from those upon whom it falls, but this tax is objectionable in itself. If it shall be placed upon the statute books the troubles with it will but have begun. Mr. TAFT will be fortunate if he is defeated with this bill, and more fortunate yet if he perceives how welcome a thing he can do by having it withdrawn.

VAGARIES AT HARVARD.

A contributor to The Boston Transcript thus summarizes some of the "singular ideas" recently associated "directly or indirectly, justly or unjustly," with Harvard University:

> That Mars carries passengers. That folks can talk to them with looking-glasses. That alcohol is the only reliable foundation for morality. That laboring men are the privileged class. That by reading for fifteen minutes a day any man may possess himself of a liberal education. That the dead can communicate with the living.

There is a touch of hyperbole in this summary which would be pardonable only when the critic of Harvard is a Bostonian. We did not all understand that Prof. PICKERING committed himself to the theory that Mars is inhabited, and some of us detected irony in his suggestion of sending messages from the earth by means of a $10,000,000 reflector. Prof. MUNSTERBERG'S relatively favorable remarks touching alcohol served as a wholesome counterblast to the extravagant assertion of some total abstainers. Prof. JAMES'S delusion touching Mrs. PIPER'S communications with spirits is surely personal and does not involve Harvard; while it is likely that Dr. ELIOT'S remarks about reading and learning have been misinterpreted. But it is a matter of fact that the delusions and vagaries of college professors, when they are expressed in print, tend to prejudice the common mind against the institutions they serve. It would be well for Harvard if its ancient aspect of serene gravity could be restored.

Yet the professors are human beings, and the limelight of publicity now falls so easily on the exponents of eccentric, extravagant, and sensational ideas, while sound, old-fashioned scholarship remains in shadow. There are a few successful educators in this country who deliberately employ sensational methods to stir the minds of their students.

THE INVIOLABLE COMPACT.

> Eighty million wearers of woolens are paying yearly much more than the total value of the domestic wool clip, to afford excess profits to a comparatively small number of sheep raisers and worsted yarn spinners.—From a letter of the National Association of Clothiers to President TAFT.

Do these clothiers know what they are doing? Are they aware that they are demanding of the President that he interfere to smash a contract that has bound accordant interests in a most profitable union for forty-two years?

The wool growers and the wool manufacturers met privately in the City of Washington in April, 1866, and arranged a schedule of tariff duties for their mutual interest and protection. The duties on wool and on manufactures of wool were adjusted and harmonized with a precision that left the wool grower nothing to complain of and put the manufacturer of worsteds in a position to extort the last possible dollar out of the American consumer. The highest duty was imposed on the wool out of which is made the clothing of the poor; the wool that goes into the high-priced fabrics worn by the rich was lightly taxed. The wool schedule put millions into the pockets of the worsted manufacturers; it put garments made of wool beyond the reach of the poor. Shoddy was good enough for them.

The two parties to the compact could draw up a schedule. They could not enact it into law. So they took in a third partner, the Republican Party. Their wool duties went into the tariff of 1867 almost unchanged. They were retained in the McKinley tariff and in the Dingley tariff. The compact still holds, for in the present revision the wool growers and the woolen men insist upon the retention of the Dingley duties, and the Republican Congress keeps to the letter of the agreement. The House made only insignificant changes, which were struck out in the Senate. The conference committee will have nothing to dispute about in the wool schedule, which will go to the President substantially in the terms and with the exactions of the Dingley act.

The sheep raisers and the manufacturers make money by the bargain. What interest has the Republican Party in keeping to its terms? The answer to that question is suggested by Mr. ANDREW J. SOLIS of Boston in a letter to the Republican Representatives in Congress from New England:

> The shepherds and the worsted spinners have stood pat in 1909 as in 1867. There is no mystery as to the motive. They stand together that they may continue to plunder the people. The mystery is in the motive that would lead the people's representatives to stand pat with them in the light of the truth as to the effects of this robber tariff and the methods by which it has been created and continued in force. How much did the Worsted Trust contribute to the Republican Congressional campaign fund of 1908? And was its contribution given with the understanding that the agreement between the shepherds and the worsted spinners at Chicago one month before the election should be ratified by Congress at the special session after the inauguration?

Mr. SOLIS, of course, does not know that the worsted combination contributed to the Congressional campaign fund—if he did he would not ask questions about it. But it is a matter of the commonest knowledge that the Republican Party has mercilessly "fried the fat" out of the interests its tariff laws have enriched. Notoriously that has been the consideration for entering into the compact. The party contributes the tariff laws, the interests supply the campaign funds. The consumer, though, pays all the bills. He furnishes the money out of which campaign contributions are made.

Do the National Clothiers delude themselves with the belief that by a puny letter to the President they can break this compact that has been in force and religiously kept since 1867? They have, indeed, sent their remonstrance to the right quarter. Neither the House nor the Senate would pay the slightest attention to their letter. Mr. TAFT may take it under consideration. He is the one man in the country who has the power to break up this covenant between the greed of money and the greed of power. But has he the courage?

JUDGE KEOGH'S RENOMINATION.

That a good Judge should be continued upon the bench by successive renominations so long as he is willing and able to perform acceptably the duties of the office is a principle so frequently acted upon in this State that it has become a maxim of public policy. It is supported by sound reasons. It is right that the experience, the learning, the facility in the dispatch of business acquired in a term of fourteen years should be of continuing service to the community. Moreover, the quality of the judiciary is directly and favorably influenced by the custom. The hope of a renomination is a high incentive to industry and faithful service, it is a stimulus and an encouragement. The reward of a second term when justly bestowed makes the judicial office more attractive to the ablest members of the bar by giving to it the permanence of a career, and it is well that that assurance should be given in every meritorious case, to overcome the natural reluctance of practitioners to sacrifice the larger gains of active professional work.

These considerations, and others, are appropriately urged in support of the renomination of Justice MARTIN J. KEOGH of the Ninth Judicial District, made up of the Counties of Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess, Rockland, and Orange. Fourteen years ago Judge KEOGH was the only one of the three Democratic nominees to be elected in the district, which then included Long Island. The Bar Association of Westchester, in resolutions expressing "unqualified approval of MARTIN J. KEOGH as Judge and man," has urged that he be renominated by all political parties this Fall. The Brooklyn Bar Association has spoken to the same effect, emphasizing Judge KEOGH'S high qualifications, his strict impartiality, sterling ability, wide knowledge of the law, and his "proper sense of justice as applied to individuals of all stations of life amid the constant change of civic conditions."

It is a Republican district, but the Republican County Committee of Westchester by a vote of 117 to 2 has indorsed the renomination, and the Democratic County Committee recently passed a similar resolution. It should be a non-partisan re-election by the votes of both parties. That is the great virtue of the custom, since it takes the courts out of politics, and tends to create a judiciary by the will and choice of the people, which is in many ways better than having the party bosses select our Judges.

GONDOLAS GIVE WAY TO MOTOR BOATS.

What Venice will be without gondolas the tourist will soon have the opportunity of judging. The Mayor of Venice has revoked the licenses of the gondoliers who had refused to call off their strike, while the city fathers are at work striving to bring the ordinance governing gondolas up to date. This calamity—for in one sense it is a calamity—had an origin characteristic of these modern days.

The proprietor of a hotel overlooking the Grand Canal purchased a number of motor boats. There is a municipal law which requires the passenger traffic along the small canals to be carried on by gondolas. This law the hotel proprietor transgressed and was duly arrested and fined. He continued, however, to defy the law, and when next arrested explained that his motor boats were furnished gratuitously to the guests of his hotel, and therefore were like private vehicles and might go where they pleased. Later on a gondolier overhauled one of his boats bound for the railway station and insisted that the passengers and baggage be transferred to his gondola. This was done; but on reaching the railway station the passengers refused to pay for their transportation, saying it had been offered them free by the hotel proprietor. The next act in the drama was a strike on the part of the gondoliers, accompanied by more or less rioting. Meanwhile hotel proprietors began to buy motor boats. The riots increased as the gondoliers realised the hopelessness of their position. At this juncture the Mayor intervened and revoked their licenses, while the law governing gondolas was brought before the Municipal Council for amendment.

What will be the result? The utility of the gondola as a conveyance of passengers and baggage has passed away forever—just as with the advent of steam launches in the lagoons the genuine romance and songs of the gondolier passed away. Above all things, the tourist requires rapid transportation in "seeing Venice." This the motor boat furnishes him. The amended law will probably deprive the gondolier of all his ancient privileges, although he may still remain for some time a picturesque personage, until, like the horse cab in land cities, he gives way to the Frankenstein monster which modern invention and the demands of modern utility have brought into being.

And Venice, the Queen of the Adriatic, with her last unique glory gone, with her marble palaces decaying, and her canals resounding with uncouth noises, no longer the inspiration of poets and artists, will become sordid, commonplace, and unlovely, a sacrifice on the altar of modernism.

ONCE MORE, THE CARP.

The Rochester Post-Express is full of ire because it regards German carp as a food inferior to a rubber boot. It asks with asperity if the editor of THE TIMES ever ate a carp. We can reply frankly that he never ate a rubber boot, and is consequently in no position to dispute the statement of The Post-Express as to its superiority to carp. We had no idea of forcing any one, in Rochester or elsewhere, to eat carp. What we intended to say was that the cultivation of carp in this country had been beneficial in providing wholesome fish food for people in neighborhoods where other fish is hard to get. That all do not like it signifies nothing. It is truly called the mudfish, and its appetite is not fastidious. But eels are highly esteemed as food, and with good reason.

The Rev. Dr. Opimian, in "Gryll Grange," who reflects so entertainingly some of the likes and dislikes of his creator, THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, refused to class the halibut among edible fish. Yet the halibut is eaten, and considered good food. Prejudices in the matter of food are like other prejudices. Tomatoes and parsnips, Astrakhan caviare and veal cutlets are regarded by some estimable persons as not fit to eat. Because Dr. JOHNSON loathed oatmeal porridge, may we not take it at breakfast with plenty of cream?

> Some men there are love not a gaping pig,
> Some that are mad if they behold a cat.

Nobody is compelled to eat either carp or rubber boots. But the recent outcry against carp is ill-judged.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Can Nobody See the Moral Side?

Neither the special friends nor the political opponents of the Bronx Borough President seem to be inclined, or even able, to take any view of his present situation except the one dictated by their own more or less private interests. The result is that the one and the other class practically ignore the question whether the statements made in the Macfarlane report are true or not.

The friends content themselves with enthusiastic laudations of Mr. HAFFEN'S kindness to people who, though numerous, were far from including all the inhabitants of the city, or even of the Bronx, and they speak warmly of this, that, and the other public improvement which he has promoted, but they do it without even attempting to prove that these particular expenditures of public money were judiciously made, or even justifiable on any other ground than that they increased the prosperity of Mr. HAFFEN'S favorites.

On the other hand, Tammany is said to be against the re-election of Mr. HAFFEN in case he should be removed by the Governor, not because he was falsely accused, but because he used his patronage and his appropriations for the strengthening of his own political position instead of for the benefit of "the organization." Of course, during the years since Mr. HAFFEN became a power in the Bronx the borough has been the scene of remarkable changes. They have turned it from a rough and rather scrubby region of outlying territory into a great city of homes and business. Naturally he has had a hand in the metamorphosis and hastened it to the best of his ability. That, however, is very far from proving that he should be credited with it all, or for assuming that without him the Bronx would still be a neglected suburb. Mr. HAFFEN is not a Tweed, but much of the praise given him recalls that which the earlier and cruder boss received for reasons not essentially different. He, too, improved the city, and so has many another man almost or quite as bad.

Siberian Methods in London.

When one reads of "hunger strikes" by the "politicals" in Russian prisons, the expedient seems a desperate remedy for desperate evils, and that it has occasionally been effective in bringing about a mitigation of abuses for which there was no other help is natural enough. That the British suffragettes should have had the stern courage to resort to the same device for bringing their jailors to terms is another and more surprising phenomenon, but the imprisoned ladies would doubtless say that the two cases are not so far unlike as the unthinking might suppose, and that when they are treated as ordinary misdemeanants, instead of as martyrs to conscience, no course is open to them except that of forcing their oppressors either to kill them or to let them go.

The oppressors, according to the London dispatches, have chosen the second of the alternatives. It was easy, at first, to say, "If they don't want to eat, let them go hungry," but that solution of the problem led to serious embarrassment when the expectation that the prisoners would soon tire of an experiment so painful was disappointed. When one of them had resolutely refused food for more than five days and was evidently determined to starve herself to death if the sort of confinement to which she objected was continued longer, the authorities weakened and let her go. With her went the other women who were apparently prepared to imitate her example, and, of course, the "lesson" of their imprisonment was utterly lost. Mere imprisonment had become a martyrdom too common to be heroic, but voluntary starvation adds the missing element of sensational novelty and puts recognition as heroines again within the reach of any suffragette.

With this new scheme known to all, and its efficiency so brilliantly proved, it is hard to see what the hectored British Ministry is going to do next. They can, to be sure, grant the requested audiences, but that would be humiliating after so many refusals, and then there is little hope that unfruitful audiences would long satisfy these most exigent dames. People who are willing to die if they don't get what they want are not easy to manage, especially when it wouldn't do at all to let them die. Forced feeding is a possibility that seems as yet to have received no consideration, but the Warden who tried it would have to be bold indeed.

Some Facts Soon to be Available.

For two years, it seems, the Director of the Yale gymnasium has been studying the hearts of Yale students. The investigation has been careful, elaborate, and scientific, and when the report of Prof. ANDERSON is published next October we ought at last to have some definite facts to serve as a basis for talking and writing about the physical effects of athletics.

Hitherto both the critics and the defenders of strenuous sports have dealt mostly in assertions, and their conclusions have been little better than beliefs founded on general impressions. Naturally they have varied widely, and there has been about as good authority for the fear that athletics were, on the whole, bad as for the hope that they were, on the whole, good. There have been inquiries before, and not a few. Most of them, however, have covered only narrow fields.

Prof. ANDERSON, according to the preparatory announcements, has gone over the whole subject, including the boys who take no regular exercise at all, as well as those who take a little and those who take much. He will, therefore, have much of value to report in the way of comparisons, and, of course, the heart is the organ that tells most of the story. It is hinted that sensational revelations may be expected. That is as much as to say that excess in athletics begins sooner than has generally been supposed, and if that is so it certainly ought to produce some marked changes in university customs.

PHILOSOPHY OF MARRIAGE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is marriage a civil contract, or is it a sacrament? If it is a sacrament it is up to the vicegerents of God to make it what they say it is. If it is a civil contract it is up to the legal authorities to enforce its strict observance. That marriage in theory is all right cannot be denied, because there are thousands of proved instances of beautiful married lives; that marriage in practice is all wrong cannot be denied, because there are more thousands of unhappy married lives. The real facts in the case are that it is neither a civil contract nor a sacrament. It is simply an experiment by two people taking no thought of the Church or the law, of God nor man, blind to everything except their own feelings, entering into an agreement through recognized channels to live together as husband and wife. If, when their eyes are opened, when they have becom cognizant of the things that they previously ignored, they find that they have made no mistake, their lives move on happily as one. If, on the other hand, they find they have made a mistake—well, it is not necessary to go into details. And what can we do about it? Nothing. We are human beings, each subject to his own nature and the uncertainties that characterize human life, and unless, or until, we become changed beings we have got to guess our way and get there, or not, as may be. Marriage is not a failure—it is only the parties to it who are. We are hitching our wagon to a star without putting our running gear into the proper condition to stand the pace.

The New Dispersion of Jews.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Jacob H. Schiff has hit the right nail on the head in his stirring and practical address to the Jewish Chautauqua Society at Buffalo, and it is to be hoped that Jews throughout the country will strive to prevent the alarming congestion in New York and other great cities. A propaganda should be initiated in centres of oppression in Russia and Roumania that the great hope of happiness and prosperity is to be realized in the great tracts of land in the West and Southwest of the United States, and—this point is of the utmost importance—that every effort will be made to accommodate the Jew's religious and social obligations. Thousands of Jews from Russia, Roumania, Hungary, Poland, and elsewhere seek the already overcrowded ghettos in order to obtain that religious consolation necessary to their lives, for it is necessary to these poor people, and they choose the fearfully jammed sections where their brethren live because the synagogues are there.

Defends Hungarian Strikers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of to-day, in reporting the strike at the works of the Pressed Steel Car Company of Pittsburg, your reporter writes that at the plants 8,400 "Huns" are employed. Permit me to say that there is no such nationality as "Hun" in Hungary, or in any other country. Your reporter, of course, wanted to say Hungarians.

The strikers of McKees Rocks are immigrants from Hungary, plain laborers, who were outrageously treated, and therefore it is no wonder that they became excited to the highest degree. Hungarians, when times are good and prosperous here, are welcomed in Pittsburg. As Mr. Andrew Carnegie wrote to me in his own hand: "We owe a good deal of our development to your own countrymen, Hungarians, as I well know from our works of Pittsburg, where many were employed."

City Laborer's Dinner.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In replying to many letters in your columns complaining of the inefficiency of the city's employes, one of their number explains that this is caused by hunger and poverty, due entirely to the oppression of their wage payer—the city. Although no excuse for treating the city unfairly in return, it seemed possible that it might be a reason for the inefficiency, which is an undisputed fact—until this noon when I passed a gang of so-called repairers, to which gang attention has been called by other correspondents. The noon meal was in progress, and judging from the quantities of food and beer in evidence the laborers themselves were not going hungry, no matter how their "loved ones" at home might be suffering.

Victor J. Dowling for Mayor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As this is the proper time to cast about for good substantial timber for Mayor, and as the crying need of this great metropolis seems to be the want of a Mayor with backbone and grit, combined with honor and integrity, I would respectfully suggest the name of the Hon. Victor J. Dowling, a man of whom the City of New York needs be proud, and who throughout his career as a public officer has always maintained the highest standard of integrity.

I trust that others will state their views in reference to this suggestion for a candidate, as the time is now ripe.

WRONGS OF THE CUSTOMS.

Returning Americans Often Dealt With Unjustly by Officials.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The case of Mrs. R. G. Dun and the shameful imposition lately practiced on her by the customs authorities should not pass into oblivion, but should be kept before the public eye, as it calls for condemnation, indignation, reparation, and reformation. This lady, who made no attempt to conceal or smuggle anything into the country, but on the contrary made excessive provision amounting to $1,000 for paying any duty on her goods, was fined $1,000, in addition to a duty of $1,200, for failure to write a "declaration."

This is an outrage on the liberty of an American citizen which demands a protest from our public. The tax imposed was $200 in excess of the price of her goods. If this proceeding is justified by so-called "customs law" the sooner such an iniquitous law is repealed the better. It certainly is a violation of the liberties of a people which calls itself free. Where is the justification of requiring this double assertion, which has been rightly called a double "humiliation," on the part of a returning passenger?

So far from being treated as a criminal Mrs. Dun should have been applauded for her submission to an odious tariff in placing a sum so generous and so disproportioned to the value of her purchases, and for her upright and honest conduct. Truly, if she had been a deceiver or a smuggler how could her punishment have been greater?

As the Appraiser sometimes fixes his own valuation on goods he examines, how is it possible for a passenger to make an exact "declaration"? Especially as the price paid in Europe does not conform to the estimated value here. The writer knows of a case where some little souvenirs whose cost did not exceed $5 or $6 were appraised by an unscrupulous official at $25, which he required in payment, and the victim of his greed had no redress.

Another case was that of a gentleman whose ancestor, an early colonist, came over in the ship Mary and John in 1634, and helped to lay the foundations of our Republic, who was overhauled and browbeaten by a customs official, a foreigner, whose broken English could hardly be understood, and compelled by this alien to pay duty on a few unmounted photographs which he had in his satchel. The late Mrs. Astor set a noble example in her protest against the injustice of the Custom House. She bought two dresses abroad, suitable to her means and station, and when, because of her wealth, an utterly disproportionate and exorbitant duty was claimed, she renounced her dresses, which were sold at auction. She would not have missed even the excessive charge made had she paid it, but she stood firm for a principle, and all right-minded people applauded her for her advocacy of the rights of an American citizen.

NEW BUILDING CODE.

Restrict Natural Cement, Which Is Efficient and Cheap.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The use of natural cement is much restricted by the new Building Code, and it is a fact that there can be obtained in the open market brands of natural cement which are almost equal in quality to many brands of Portland cement, while material of the latter class can be obtained only at prices considerably above the prices charged for natural cement.

Some natural cements have been known to so increase in strength after a long period of years as actually to exceed the strength developed by many brands of Portland. Consequently, by restricting the use of natural cement, the promulgators of the new code have in no way enhanced the strength and safety of the poor man's dwelling. The only thing accomplished will be to make him pay more rent.

Natural cement, commonly known as Rosendale cement, has been on the market for seventy-five years, and has a strength greater than is required for most building purposes. With it was constructed such magnificent and lasting monuments as the Capitol and Washington Monument at Washington, the $10,000,000 City Hall at Philadelphia, the Croton Aqueduct, the reservoirs, the Post Office Building, the Brooklyn Bridge, in New York, and, in the last-mentioned city, the old Coal and Iron Exchange, in Cortlandt Street, in the demolition of which it was necessary to use dynamite to tear asunder the monolithic bond of old Rosendale cement and granite.

Natural cement, having been successfully used in great works during the past three-quarters of a century, and having been tested by actual use and found to have enduring strength, should not now be condemned without at least a fair hearing and trial. What is the real purpose of the provisions of the new code against its use?

Does not the situation warrant the asking of the following questions?

If a natural cement will stand all reasonable tests and requirements for strength and durability, why should its use be prohibited on that character of work to which it is particularly adapted?

In whose interest has this been done, and why?

Natural cement has been used on some of the oldest and strongest masonry in New York. If it can be demonstrated that a natural cement is a proper and safe article to use in construction work, is not the burden of proof up to those who prepared the Building Code to show why they force the use of more expensive materials? The main points are the preservation of health and the protection of life, and these should always be uppermost in the minds of public servants. The public is not interested in particular brands. What the public rightfully demands is absolute safety in all building construction.

SUPPOSED MIRACLES.

Cures Are Real and Science Will Some Day Know Why.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why shouldn't the woman be cured of her blindness by the supposed miracle of St. Anne, as noted in Monday's TIMES? Her blindness was not organic—the organs of sight were not destroyed, and they were restored to their activities by some power not yet explained, but hereafter to be as science goes further into the field of research. I know personally of an instance not less miraculous than the one reported. A young woman of my acquaintance in New York injured her leg in a fall, and for several years she was compelled to wear a brace in order to walk. She was able to have the advice and treatment of the greatest specialists here and abroad, but none gave her relief. Indeed, the leg was shrinking, and it was believed that death would result. Finally she determined to try the miraculous waters of Lourdes. She was not an enthusiast on miracle cures, nor in the slightest a religious fanatic. On the contrary, she was extremely modern and liberal in her ideas of such cures. But she went to Lourdes; she read the prayer printed on a card handed to all applicants; she did not bathe in the miraculous waters, but after a few hours there she went to Paris, and the next night when she arose from her knees after saying her nightly prayer she walked across the room without the brace, and has had no use for it since. Her condition rapidly became normal, and for the past five or six years she has been entirely free from an ailment which the most eminent medical authorities pronounced incurable. I would scarcely have believed this if it had come to me by hearsay, but I know whereof I speak, and I have no belief in miracles. Material results, however, are different, and they exist. What brings them about is the thing our scientists want to find out, and they will in time. They know now to an extent, but not far enough to formulate a practice from their theories.

Bishop Williams and Rockefeller, Jr.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES, under the caption "Scored Rockefeller, Jr.," you report Bishop Williams's last sermon.

The Bishop wonders if that young man, the Bible-class leader, ever "read the Bible he professes to teach." It is probable that the class leader may not have read it so often or studied it so deeply as Dr. Williams has done. But his sincerity cannot be impeached, and when it is noted that the class leader gives gratis the results of his studies, he comes pretty well up in Christian stature to that of the more learned Bishop, who gives the results of his deeper studies for a generous salary.

The learned Bishop rather "scores" against himself, instead of against the class leader. Does he not?

CRANE TALKS CHINA WITH BANKERS HERE

AMOUNT TO BE INCREASED

America Would Thus Share Equally with Great Britain, France, and Germany Without Cutting Them Down.

Charles R. Crane of Chicago, who has been selected by President Taft for appointment as Minister to China, was the guest at a luncheon at the Mid-Day Club yesterday, of a number of the banking interests, including representatives of J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the First National Bank, and the National City Bank, who have united to participate in Chinese financing. At the luncheon Mr. Crane was formally introduced to representatives of other banking institutions than those named, all of whom, however, are presumably more or less interested in the endeavor to secure representation for American capital in Chinese enterprises.

It was said that no definite proposals of any sort were discussed, inasmuch as the luncheon was very largely of a social nature, but conditions in China and in the Far East, with which Mr. Crane is entirely familiar as a result of his extensive travels and study, were canvassed in a general way, as were also the various questions of policy which must naturally precede any such campaign as that in which American capitalists are now about to engage in the East.

Among those at the luncheon and conference were H. P. Davison and Charles Steele of Morgan & Co., President F. L. Hine of the First National Bank, Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., A. B. Hepburn, President of the Chase National Bank; John B. Dennis of Blair & Co., and members of a number of other banking houses and banks.

"We met mainly for social purposes," said Mr. Crane afterward, "in order to get personally acquainted. I shall take up the details of the situation in the course of the next few weeks. As for the Hankow loan, I have every hope that the last proposal of an increase in the total amount raised so as to give America a share with England, France, and Germany will result in a satisfactory close of the deal. We want to get in, not because there is any particular financial advantage to us in the present proposal, but because it will increase our prestige. We are, in fact, looking twenty years ahead, and not only at the present situation.

"When other nations have tried to make loans to China they have always attached a string. The Chinese authorities got tired of their tactics, and for a time refused to borrow any more money from foreign sources. They determined to finance all their projects from Peking. But they have large legitimate needs for money. They want railroads, an army, and a navy, and so they have been forced again to go outside the empire. This particular railroad is really needed; it is 1,000 miles long and will tap some of the richest parts of the empire.

"In seeking participation in the present transaction, America asks no favors. She wants recognition of her standing among the nations, and that is all. The four firms interested in the loan, J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the First National Bank, and the National City Bank, are leaving all the negotiations in the hands of the Government. They are not seeking a rate of interest they could not get easily elsewhere, perhaps 4 per cent., and they will have to create in this country a market for Chinese securities. They are prepared to take the medicine the Government may prepare for them in the expectation that ultimately they will receive full returns."

Mr. Crane said he understood Russian bankers had asked for a portion of the Hankow loan, but he believed that the Russo-Japanese war had left neither of these countries in a condition to share financially in Chinese enterprises at present.

PEKING, July 20.—On account of the failure of the negotiations at the recent meetings of international bankers in London and Paris an attempt is being made at Peking to quickly close the Hankow Railway loan by increasing the amount so as to give America equal participation and not reduce the original allotment to the other three powers—Great Britain, France, and Germany.

This arrangement was agreed to by the Chinese Foreign Board on Saturday, and the four days' negotiations ended with the consultations of foreign bankers to-day when the financiers telegraphed to their principals recommending that the foregoing settlement be accepted.

A peculiar situation in connection with the loan has arisen during the last few days, and was caused by a dispatch which was sent to the Chinese Foreign Board on Saturday by M. Korotovitz, the Russian Minister to China, on instructions from St. Petersburg. The dispatch asks China, provided more money can be used in this or other loans, to admit Russian capital, pointing out that as China is borrowing abroad Russia should be considered on account of her large interests in the Yang-tse-kiang region. Foreign bankers here, ignoring their own dissensions, attribute Russia's action to the policy of President Taft.

The Foreign Legations and bankers are showing special activity in view of the fact that any recognition by China of Russian representations would have the effect of validating the Austrian proposals made last April and the Japanese claims made in 1907.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—American participation in the loan of $27,500,000, about to be negotiated by the Chinese Government on the Hankow-Sze-Chuen Railroad, and other enterprises will be arranged to the entire satisfaction of this Government, thus assuring the maintenance of the "open door" in China. Assurances to this effect came to the State Department to-day from Peking, and gave great satisfaction to the officials who have been patiently watching developments both in the financial centres of Europe and at Peking, and who have been insisting to the Chinese Government that the United States was fully entitled to share with foreign bankers in the allotment of the loan. American bankers are likely to receive a quarter of the loan.

LIVE ONES.

"Did Bacon write Shakespeare?" Perhaps,
  But what's it to us if he did?
Leave that to the erudite chaps
  Who search where the ciphers are hid.
If Truth has someway gone amiss,
  Let History deal with the thing.
The question before us is this:
  "Will Jeffries re-enter the ring?"

"Who wrote those old letters?" I see
  They've dug up poor Junius again,
Until I imagine that he
  Regrets that he e'er scratched a pen.
What odds who the writer of these?
  Let History find him his place.
The question is now, if you please:
  "Can Pittsburg hold up to the pace?"

"Can Spirits commune with us here?"
  Now why should we worry or fret?
I've always kept wide open ear,
  But I never communed with one yet.
Let Worry not wrinkle its brow,
  And let hot contention be still,
The question before us is now:
  "Will Taft sign or veto the bill?"

"What creatures may live upon Mars?"
  Well, really I cannot now say.
I've always thought best that the stars
  Should run their affairs their own way.
If Mars should have men, I allow
  My work will go on just the same,
But tell me—in three years from now
  "Will Bryan get into the game?"

LADIES' DAY AT LARCHMONT REGATTA

Water Sports, Illuminations and Ball at Night Attract Many Guests.

EVENTS FOR MEMBERS' SONS

Yachts in Harbor Decked Out in Full-Dress Regalia—Sham Battle of "War" Fleets.

Never has the Larchmont Yacht Club had a more delightful day than yesterday for its water sports in its race week regatta. A big delegation of swimmers from the New York Athletic Club and other local organizations disported themselves in the water off the clubhouse float for over two hours to the keen enjoyment of 2,000 spectators.

The broad lawn overlooking the harbor, in which scores of yachts rode at anchor in full-dress regalia, was occupied almost exclusively by ladies, while the club officials, from Commodore Wilson Marshall down, mingled with their guests, and made them all feel that they were having the jolliest kind of a time.

A gun fired from Commodore Marshall's flagship Atlantic shortly after noon was the signal for the yachts in the harbor to dress ship, and in less than an hour thousands of colored flags fluttered from the mast heads of the sailing and steam yachts. The clubhouse and lawn were attractively decorated, and many luncheon parties witnessed the sports from the broad piazza. In the evening the clubhouse and the grounds were brilliantly illuminated.

The novel feature of the evening was a bombardment of rival fleets in the harbor, the "war ships" consisting of launches from the boats in the harbor, about twenty on a side. After running down the bay half a mile the "battle" fleets approached each other, one side burning red lights, the other blue fire, and amid a blaze of fireworks the naval "fight" was waged for several minutes. This was followed by a ball.

An excellent programme of eleven water sports was provided under the direction of Rudolph J. Schaeffer and several members of the New York Athletic Club, including Capt. J. T. Mahoney, Eugene Giannini, R. O. Haubold, Robert C. Kammerer, Matthew P. Halpin, and Robert Stoll. One of the features comprised three races for members' sons, all being closely contested. The victors received handsome prizes.

W. Roy Manny, a Yale student, won the opening event for members' sons, a seventy-five-yard swim, in 51 1-5 seconds. Manny scored another triumph later when he captured the sack race.

C. S. Hunting won the tub race for members' sons. P. Cobden captured the harlequin race, one of the most amusing contests of the day, as the contestants were required to swim to a float, dress themselves in women's bathing costumes, and swim back. Roars of laughter greeted the efforts of the boys to pull the stockings over their wet feet, and the clumsy way in which the skirts were put on caused most of them to float away before the swimmers reached home. Cobden, however, dressed himself carefully, and as every other contestant was disqualified for not complying with the rules, he won, although last in. The open harlequin race was won by B. W. King of the New York Athletic Club.

One of the prettiest exhibitions was the fancy and high diving from a platform twenty feet high. Walter R. Lee won this event handily, his backward and somersault dives being nearly perfect. He scored 132 points, F. A. Mullen being second, with 98, and Joseph A. Ruddy third, with 80, all from the New York Athletic Club.

Seven contestants started in the mile swim. L. B. Goodwin, one of the New York A. C.'s best swimmers, won in 26:59 4-5, W. Auerbach of the New York Swimming Association being second in 29:06, and Edward Spielberger of the same club third. J. H. Riley of the New York A. C. won the 150-yard swim in 2:38 2-5, and J. Morrell won the 300-yard handicap swim in 4:29. Goodwin, the scratch man, was third, his actual time being 4:13. W. W. Swan won the tub race for registered athletes, but he was beaten with his companion, Carl Barton, in the obstacle canoe race by D. B. Jackson and C. Kear.

A band on the lawn added to the festivities of the day. Commodore Wilson Marshall had among his guests Fleet Capt. Morton W. Smith and Mrs. Smith, Augustus N. Mott, John G. Saville, H. A. Bergman, and James Goin. Among others present were:

Supreme Court Justices John Proctor Clarke and Francis M. Scott, Vice Commodore Joseph E. Fletcher and Mrs. Fletcher, Rear Commodore Ralph Townsend and Mrs. Townsend, Commodore Hazen Hoyt of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club, Mrs. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. MYSTERY IN A WOMAN'S DEATH

Police Looking for Man She Accused of Throwing Her Out of Window.

The police have a puzzle on their hands to prove whether Mary Peck of 602 West Forty-eighth Street, who was killed early yesterday morning when she fell from the fifth story of that house, was pushed out of the window or thrown out.

The Peck woman was one of a party that had been celebrating the birthday of one Harvey Mills, who with four other persons are now locked up in the House of Detention as witnesses.

Harry Kerrigan, one of the men arrested, told Coroner Acritelli that there was reason to believe the woman had been thrown out of the window.

It is said that the Peck woman, who died yesterday morning in Flower Hospital, recovered consciousness long enough to say that a man named Adam Hoffman of Schenectady or Rochester had pushed her out of the window. So far the police have found no trace of Hoffman.

Policeman Flood found the woman unconscious on the sidewalk at about 1 o'clock in the morning. Besides Kerrigan, Edward Mahler, Marion Mills, Harvey Mills, and James McDonald were arrested and sent to the House of Detention.

More Time for Sugar Trust Pleas.

The indicted Directors of the American Sugar Refining Company did not appear yesterday before Judge Hand to plead to the charges of conspiracy brought against them as a result of the Sugar Trust's $1,250,000 loan to Adolph Segal, which was made the basis of the plan to close up the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company. Tompkins McIlvaine, the attorney, decided to avail himself of the two weeks' time offered by Judge Hand to the defendants in the case who are not American Sugar Refining Company Directors. The final pleas of demurrers will therefore be put in on Aug. 2.

WIFE SUES PASTOR COVELL.

Deserted Her, She Says, Five Years Ago—Wants Alimony, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Wash., July 20.—Charging that her husband, a clergyman, had sent her from Maine to Washington in 1904 on the false representation that he would soon join her, Mrs. Winifred S. Covell yesterday asked the Superior Court for a decree of divorce from Herbert E. Covell, who is said to have a church on Long Island.

For five years, Mrs. Covell told the court, she has been working and caring for herself and child without assistance from her husband. She now lives at Burton, Vashon Island, seven miles from Tacoma. The couple were married in April, 1894, at Lincoln, Neb., and later her husband was sent to take charge of a church in Maine.

In September, 1904, Mrs. Covell states, her husband made up his mind to remove to Washington, and sent her to Puyallup with the promise that he would soon join her.

Mrs Covell and her child landed in Puyallup with very little funds, and she shortly found it necessary to go to work. Though she waited five years for her husband to join her her vigil was in vain. She asks for $30 per month alimony, to be paid out of the clergyman's salary, alleged to be of ample proportions, and also asks for the custody of their child.

OBJECT TO NEGRO TROOPS.

Citizens of Vermont Wrought Up Over Coming of a Regiment.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., July 20.—This city, one of the strongest centres of abolition sentiment before the civil war, is intensely wrought up over a decision of the War Department to quarter 1,200 negro calvarymen at Fort Ethan Allen, three miles away. White people have refused to eat in restaurants with some of the negro soldiers already here, and citizens of the city and Winooski, a town near the fort, are demanding separate cars for whites and blacks on the trolley road.

The Free Press, an old and conservative paper, says to-day:

"The decision of the War Department to quarter the Tenth Cavalry, all the troopers in which are negroes, in Northern Vermont, marks a precedent in the disposition of black soldiers. It is the first time negro troops have been quartered in New England—the first time, in fact, that soldiers of color have been sent to any post east of the Mississippi. If the Government officials, after their trouble with Brownsville and other posts, thought the extreme North would make no objection to the presence of so large a body of negroes, they were in error. A Southern town could hardly be more up in arms than this city and Winooski are to-day."

GOT A WHALE IN THE SURF.

Nassau-by-the-Sea Cottager Spiked It to Beach and Shot It.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BEACH, L. I., July 20.—Members of the cottage colony of Nassau-by-the Sea, about six miles east of here, saw to-day an eighteen-foot while which had been found in the surf by William Van Ness, a cottager there. He was out for an early morning constitutional when he spied what at first appeared to be an overturned boat rolling in the surf, and as if covered with a black tarpaulin.

His curiosity aroused, he hurried to find that the object was alive and on closer inspection proved to be a whale. Mr. Van Ness, who is a good fisherman, then began to cast about for something to answer the purpose of a harpoon. Finding a boathook he improvised a shark's hook and fastened the whale to a stake. Then he ran to the nearest house, got a gun, and shot the whale.

The mammal will be cut up and boiled, and its finder will be several hundred dollars richer after selling the oil.

SPECIAL CABIN FOR HER DOG.

Marquise Dusmet's Newfoundland Was Too Big for Liner's Kennels.

The Marquise Dusmet, who arrived yesterday from Cherbourg on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. on a two months' visit to some friends in this country, brougth with her a fine Landseer Newfoundland dog which was the admiration of the passengers and the dread of the deck stewards on the liner.

The dog was so big that it was found impossible to put him in the ordinary kennels on the boat deck, so Capt. Winter had a special house constructed for him by the ship's carpenter. It measured 9 feet by 7, and was 6 feet high. In this kennel on the boat deck, Caesar, the Marquise's pet made the trip.

He was exercised every morning by two brawny seamen under the direction of Rudolph Spielplatz, the dog steward of the Kaiser Wilhelm II., who was responsible for the safety of the animals under his charge.

SCORES KISS HEALING RELICS.

Throng of the Sick Pours Into the Church of St. Jean Baptiste.

Fully 1,000 persons, among them some 500 men, women, and children, crippled or otherwise afflicted, poured into the Church of St. Jean Baptiste, 159 East Seventy-sixth Street, yesterday, the fourth day of the Novena of St. Anne, to kiss the healing relics.

At 5:30 in the morning, a half hour before the chapel was opened, there stood about the doors a considerable throng waiting. From the time the doors were thrown open until late in the evening the afflicted poured in and out in a steady stream.

For the most part the people had no ailment, yet there were many women themselves whole, carrying in their ams or leading by the hand little children with bandages about their heads or braces on their legs, and there were, besides, many misshapen or limping men and women. But if any were cured the priests did not hear of it.

Benedictions will be given at 4 o'clock this afternoon and at 8 this evening.

GLASS DEALER IN TROUBLE.

Creditors File a Petition In Bankruptcy Against David Shuldiner.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against David Shuldiner, wholesale dealer in plate and window glass at 321 to 325 East Sixty-fourth Street, by Arthur L. Fullman, attorney for these creditors: Lustig & Weil, $215; John A. Backs, $190; and A. J. Schwarz & Son, $101. It was alleged that while insolvent he transferred part of his property to creditors to prefer them and admitted in writing inability to pay his debts.

Phell & Bird, attorneys for Shuldiner, said that three creditors had taken possession of the business, put Shuldiner out, and were running the business, to the disadvantage of the other creditors. He placed the liabilities at over $200,000 and assets between $60,000 and $80,000, including equity in real estate.

DR. ELIOT DEFENDS HIS "5-FOOT SHELF"

Thinks the Public Has Failed to Understand What He Meant About Books.

LIST NOT YET COMPLETE

Omitted the Bible and Shakespeare Because Every Reader Is Supposed to Have Them.

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard comes strongly to the defense of his "five-foot shelf of books" in a letter to the editors of Collier's Weekly, to be published this week.

Dr. Eliot says he is convinced from the recent discussions in the press and in private conversation that his selection of a library which will give a man reading its volumes ten minutes a day a liberal education has not been correctly understood. He says also that the list which has been published was given out without his knowledge and is incomplete and inaccurate.

This is the letter:

> Asticou, Me., July 10, 1909.
>
> Gentlemen: It was your desire and purpose to publish a carefully selected library which, if conscientiously read, would make of the judicious and ambitious reader a cultivated man, and it was this educational purpose which interested me in your undertaking.
>
> The recent discussions in the public press and in private conversation over "the five-foot shelf of books" satisfy me that the project had not been correctly apprehended in some quarters. The incomplete and inaccurate list which appeared in the newspapers a few weeks ago was published without my knowledge, and gives an erroneous impression of the project. At this date, not more than half of the books have been decided on.
>
> The volumes which I undertook to select are intended to give faithful readers who know no language but English a true picture of man's imaginings and reasonings through more than twenty centuries. They must all be works of high literary merit, and must illustrate well the mental and moral history of mankind. While the collection will inevitably contain much philosophy and religion which the twentieth century does not accept, it should demonstrate that much of the present stock of available wisdom has long been at the service of educated men.
>
> To depict the "Stream of the World," the collection must contain worthy representatives of both the ancient literatures and the great National literatures which have been created since the revival of letters; so that the proportions of the different literatures have to be carefully considered. Many famous books are unavailable because too long—that is, they would occupy a disproportionate space in the series.
>
> The collection cannot represent largely the natural science of the nineteenth century, or give much space to the current thought of to-day, because these recent acquisitions of the race have, for the most part, not yet been cast in durable literary form.
>
> The Bible and Shakespeare are omitted because these books are within the reach of most Americans who read at all. Very truly yours, CHARLES W. ELIOT.

The editors of Collier's will make this comment:

> There is little to add to Dr. Eliot's admirable statement. It was natural that the publication of an incomplete and inaccurate list should have provoked some "silly season" editorials. These wordy symposia concerning books are dearly prized occasions for a display of newspaper erudition. They give a pleasant literary flavor to the page and offer a happy diversion from the weary tariff.
>
> Out of the mass of criticism, restrained, violent, flippant, or merely dull, which followed the publication of the supposed list, we may take note of one or two misleading assumptions.
>
> One is that Dr. Eliot consented to lend his name for money to an "advertising scheme" designed to unload upon the public certain books which the publishers had in stock.
>
> Dr. Eliot consented to select and edit the five-foot shelf of books now newly published under the name of "The Harvard Classics," because he believed by so doing he would encourage a taste for good reading among the people. The publishers feel that the honorarium he received has recompensed him poorly enough for the time and labor he is now spending. That Dr. Eliot, after a lifetime devoted to teaching, should have undertaken, it is needless to state with the knowledge and approval of his associates, the selection and annotation of "The Harvard Classics" should be no surprise to those who have followed his public utterances for the past forty years.

It is understood that Dr. Eliot will not announce the authentic and complete list for some weeks yet.

H. P. TOLER'S MIND ASKEW.

In Bellevue Now with the Delusion That He Is the Messiah.

Henry Pennington Toler, once a member of the New York Stock Exchange, is in Bellevue Hospital under examination as to his mental condition. He has been there since Sunday afternoon, but the fact did not come out until yesterday.

Toler lived in the Seville apartments, at Twenty-ninth Street and Madison Avenue. Since he had trouble with the leaders of the Christian Science Church, some years ago, he has been subject to delusions, according to his brother, Hugh, who lives at the Standish Arms, in Brooklyn.

In 1901, soon after selling his seat in the Stock Exchange, Toler, in the name of several hundred alleged heirs, laid claim to estates in Harlem, under grants, it was alleged, made by King George III. Toler held public meetings, established extensive offices, and for two years created quite a stir in Harlem.

Later he published a book entitled "Arise and Take Thy Journey." It predicted that New York would be the New Jerusalem.

Recently, it is said, he has had the delusion that he is the Messiah, destined to be crucified and to come to life again and save mankind.

DUNLOP ESTATE IN COURT.

Niece of the Late Dr. Clark Dunlop Says His Executors Act Maliciously.

Mrs. Gertrude D. Hawes, niece of the late Dr. Clark W. Dunlop, who was declared an incompetent in 1908, is bringing action in the Supreme Court against his widow, the executrix of his estate, Mrs. Eliza C. Dunlop of 112 West Eighty-sixth Street, and Oliver J. Wells and Henry H. Snedicker, her attorneys, for $10,000 damages each for "vexatious and malicious continuance of proceedings" against her in the affairs of the estate in question. Yesterday Mrs. Hawes petitioned Justice Brady to strike out in the answer of the defendants certain matter, which she alleged was scandalous. Decision was reserved.

In 1907 Mrs. Hawes asked the Supreme Court to declare Dr. Dunlop, then a very old man, incompetent, and a year later the court appointed his wife to look after his affairs. Within a few days he died, and his will was admitted to probate.

Counsel for the doctor appealed unsuccessfully to both the Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals from the lower court's decision, which decided that the cause had abated with his death. It was on these proceedings that the present suit was brought.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Dunlop applied to Surrogate Cohalan for an order directing the Title Guarantee and Trust Company and John W. Bartlett, as trustees under her husband's will, to pay her the income on a trust of $150,000 left for her, and on this matter the Surrogate reserved decision. In objecting to the payment, counsel for the trustees argued that it would be unsafe, while the validity of the will is before the Supreme Court, to pay the income without an order of the Surrogate.

To his widow he leaves the residue of his estate should she not remarry, and all jewelry, household furniture, bric-à-brac, and other personal property. In the event of her remarriage she will receive $10,000 in trust and the residue will go equally to the daughters, or issue. Any bequests he may be in possession of at the time of his death from the estate of his mother, whose name is not given, he wishes turned over to a sister, Martha Bacon of Salt Lake City.

His sister-in-law, Ida Sternberger; brother-in-law, Davis Sternberger, and his friend Henry Froelich receive $1,000 each. A trust fund of $100,000 is directed to be created, the income on which is to go to his wife for life, in lieu of dower. The residue of the estate goes to his daughter.

'BEAUTY SPOT' FOLK TAKE A DAY'S JAUNT

Much Benefited by Doings in the Open Air, but the Show Was Somewhat Late.

SPORTS FOR OZONE CLUB

The Ozone Coming Incidentally from the Breeze on the Hudson Between Athletic Stunts.

Members of the "Beauty Spot" company, now playing at the Herald Square Theatre, recently formed an organization known as the Ozone Club. Its by-laws pledged them to live as much as possible in the open air and schew midnight suppers and such things. The club gave an outing yesterday, which included a trip up the Hudson as far as Tarrytown on the City of Worcester and return. The trip up the river was made without particular incident, but the return journey developed consequences which almost resulted in an abandonment of the performance last night. As it was, the curtain did not go up on the first scene until nearly 9 o'clock, and Jefferson De Angelis saved the performance by recounting as a part of the plot the moving accidents of flood and field which provided most of the day's excitement.

All the members of the "Beauty Spot's" chorus are ex-officio members of the Ozone Club. The chorus made Campbell Casad President, and he made the arrangements for the excursion. Jefferson De Angelis raced the steamer as far as Tarrytown in his automobile and won the $100 prize offered to him if he made better time than the steamboat. Miss Isabelle D'Armond, prima donna of the show since Marguerite Clarke left, chaperoned the chorus. The programme included athletic events, for which suitable prizes were awarded.

First, Miss Viola Gillette, one of the principals, gave a tea party, with real tea and other drinkables, in the main dining room. Several score other passengers on the boat besides the chorus girls formed in line and eagerly accepted the beverages Miss Gillette dispensed. Then came the main event of the day, the finding of a so-called "beauty spot," said to be hidden on the ship, the prize being a diamond ring. Miss De D'Armond succeeded in locating the black disk representing the "beauty spot" in the pocket of George MacFarland, and got the prize.

There was also a search which Miss Bertha Blake discovered without any difficulty at all, and then came a Marathon race three times around the main deck. After a spirited contest between Miss Vivian Rogers, Miss Una Millwarde, and Miss Anita MacTavish, the first-named was adjudged winner by the Racing Committee. She won a Pullman sleeping car ticket, good for the season. The second prize, won by Miss Millwarde, was a season pass for the City of Worcester, and the third, won by Miss MacTavish, was a bottle of champagne. Miss MacTavish explained that she could easily have won the first prize if her front curls hadn't got displaced, and she had not had to stop long enough to fix them.

It was after the party returned to 125th Street that the only accident occurred. A large touring car containing most of the chorus girls broke down, and its passengers had to take the Subway. That was why the curtain was held and why Mr. De Angelis in the first act had to tell funny stories to the audience till the chorus was ready.

BOSTON, July 20.—Mrs. Ida F. Taft, widow of Town Solicitor Jesse A. Taft and one of the wealthiest and most estimable women of Milford, died this morning of acute Bright's disease.

Mrs. Taft was born in Milford on April 23, 1856. Her father was Charles J. Thompson. On the paternal side her ancestry came to New Hampshire from Scotland in 1630, and one of them was the famous Hannah Dustin of Haverhill of Indian fame. Mrs. Taft was married to Jesse A. Taft, April 17, 1884. He died three years ago.

Y., forty-one years ago. KUHN, LOEB & CO. GET ATCHISON STOCK

Syndicate Takes Over $10,000,000 of Union Pacific 5 Per Cent. Holdings.

HAD NO ATCHISON COMMON

Money Obtained from Sale of Preferred Stock, Added to the Road's Cash Holdings, Already Large.

It became known in Wall Street yesterday that the Union Pacific had sold to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and a syndicate of bankers the block of $10,000,000 5 per cent. Atchison preferred stock, which the Union Pacific bought several years ago and has since held in its treasury. Union Pacific paid $103.95 a share for the stock when it was purchased in 1906, and, although the selling price now is not announced—the bankers concerned, in fact, declining to confirm or deny the reported transaction—it is understood nevertheless that the sale has been a favorable one for the railroad.

Along with the official holdings of Atchison preferred, which have now been disposed of, it has always been understood in Wall Street that the Union Pacific interests as individuals obtained very large blocks of Atchison common stock at about the same time in order to have representation upon the board of that road. Such representation was, in fact, obtained soon after the reported purchase of this common stock through the election of the late H. H. Rogers and Henry C. Frick, both Union Pacific Directors, as Directors of the Atchison. In the course of the Inter-State Commerce Commission's inquiry into the Harriman lines considerable stress was laid upon the holding of Atchison stock by the Union Pacific and the presence of Union Pacific Directors upon the Atchison board. The sale now by the Union Pacific of its acknowledged holdings of Atchison will, of course, obviate at least that part of this criticism.

One of the reports in connection with this transaction had it that the Union Pacific had replaced its holdings of Atchison preferred with Atchison common stock, but it is understood that such is not the case, and that, as a matter of fact, the Union Pacific has added the cash obtained from the transaction to its already large cash holdings, and thus put itself in strong shape in this respect.

The sale of this block of stock will, of course, mean on the surface a loss of $500,000 in the income from which the Union Pacific distributes 4 per cent. "from investments" to stockholders in addition to the 6 per cent. from railroad operation, but the income was already larger than required to meet the 4 per cent. distribution. Presumably, as a result of an agreement reached nearly two years ago with the Atchison, by which traffic conditions in California were harmoniously arranged, the holding of this block of stock was no longer necessary to the Union Pacific, particularly so since its sale will dispose of any legal question of ownership in parallel and competing lines.

GIANTS NOSED OUT IN ELEVENTH, 4 TO 3

Two Base Drives by Phelps and Evans Win for Bresnahan's Cardinals.

MATTY BREAKS A FINGER

Liner Off Delehanty's Bat Injures Famous Pitcher, Who Will be Unable to Play Again for Two Weeks.

Twilight ball is becoming fashionable on the Polo Grounds, and there is talk of moving the Giants from the shadow of Coogan's Bluff to Greenland, because the latter place is the land of the midnight sun. It is believed that with the sunshine stretched into the small hours McGraw's men would be able to finish their games by daylight. However, it probably is not practicable to make the shift at this stage of the season, for it might cause the Giants to lose the pennant. Therefore, it is possible Secretary-Treasurer Fred Knowles will have an arc lamp circuit strung about the outfield and light up the diamond with incandescents. If that is done, and if the McGrawites can have their supper kept in the oven, there will be no occasion for the hurry, worry, flurry, and scurry attending efforts to keep a game from going too far into the third or fourth hour. Above all, the Giants must not be balked in their race for the trophy. It would be a terrible disappointment to Manhattan fandom if the Pirates or Cubs should nose them out at the finish. Better to let them make a noise like a rush for the pennant than go through the motions of a dash for the pole.

These evening performances are not proving profitable. Only 3,000 persons went uptown for yesterday's game, and again the locals lost by a score of 4 to 3. This time they contented themselves with eleven innings instead of the sixteen constituting Monday's first game, and, fortunately, it wasn't a doubleheader. St. Louis thus far has taken three games out of four. To-day's is the last of the series. If the New Yorks again fail to win through lack of batting strength in general and of pinch hitters in particular, it would seem, say many of their adherents, as if it would be to their interest to pay Mike Donlin $4,000 for the rest of the season, or even more. Any man who never has batted below .314 and whose recent average was nearer to .400 ought to be a welcome acquisition to the team. In the tenth inning yesterday the Giants got three men on bases with none down, yet they couldn't rap out even a sacrifice fly. Any drive long enough to let Tenney get in from third would have spelled victory for the home players. Instead of which a short fly to Ellis was the best Murray could do; a pop-up to Byrne told the story of George Schlei, batting for O'Hara, and a grounder to Byrne not good for a bag shot Devlin's bolt. Not all the local pride in the metropolis can blind one to the fact that it soon may be Donlin or the second division.

Force is lent to that sad possibility by the fact that Christy Mathewson is out of the game for awhile. The second finger of his left hand was broken in the seventh round when he knocked down Joe Delehanty's terrific smash. That happened shortly after the home team tied the score in a batting rally that netted three counts. It put Matty out of the game, of course, and he will be incapacitated for two weeks at least. Otis Crandall took his place. The substitute pitched well for four innings, but blew up in the eleventh. Now Manager McGraw is obliged to depend on Wiltse, who can't win oftener than once a week; Raymond, who still is regarded as erratic, and Ames, always an unknown quantity. Crandall hardly counts.

Bresnahan's boys wasted no time in jockeying for a start. Three of them found a hole on the left side of the diamond and they hastened to whang through it three hits that brought in two runs. One of the raps was a double, the next a triple, the last a single. Byrne made the two-bagger, and, when Matty had fanned Ellis and Phelps, the runner came in on Konetchy's three-sacker, Kony scoring on Evans's safety. The visitors got another run in the fifth on Delehanty's walk and Hulswitt's triple.

Sallee, who pitched on Saturday, when the Cardinals won 7 to 1 by rolling up a septet of tallies in the ninth chapter, yesterday held the McGrawites to three scattered hits in five rounds. In the sixth, however, they got to him for three bingles and as many runs. Singles by Schafer and McCormick, well stopped by Hulswitt, put men on second and first with none out. Schafer counted on Murray's one-timer to right, handsome Harry going to third, but Red being thrown out, Evans to Charles, when he tried to stretch. Konetchy's fumble of O'Hara's grounder perched the batter and let McCormick in. O'Hara stole second and third and got home on Devlin's sacrifice fly.

Head to head the teams raced to the eleventh, when Phelps's two-timer, Konetchy's sacrifice, and Evans's double to right carded what turned out to be the winning run. And that occurred after three New Yorkers went out in the tenth with the bases full. The Giants, in their half of the eleventh, couldn't put the ball on the ground.

Chicago to-morrow. Oh, well!

Brooklyn's Batting Beats Champions.

Neither Jack Pfeister nor Higginbotham, his successor, could obscure the batting eyes of the Brooklyn men yesterday, and the locals won a well-earned victory by a score of 6 to 5. Two damaging errors in the ninth inning, one by McElveen and the other by Bergen, enabled the Chicagos to tie the score, but this was offset by two terrific whacks of Clement and McElveen, who placed one run between them, and thus secured the second victory from the world's champions out of four games played.

The fielding of the Brooklyns was very ragged, the exceptions being McMillan and Alperman. The little shortstop never played to a greater advantage, his stops of Tinker's hit in the sixth inning and of Chance's in the eighth being of a masterful character and caused the greatest enthusiasm among the 1,500 spectators. The score:

TIGERS BLOW UP; YANKS WIN.

Bill Donovan Wild and Ineffective and Team Erratic Behind Him.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., July 20.—"Wild Bill" Donovan, the highest priced of all the Tiger pitchers, but who works about one game a month this year, to-day proved his right to the title bestowed upon him years ago in Brooklyn, and thereby the Yankees at Bennett Park tucked away another game, 6 to 1. In the seventh and eighth innings "Wild Bill" passed six men. But for the anxiety of Warhop, Demmitt, and Austin to figure in a "cleanup" there might have been as many runs in the eighth as in the seventh inning.

The seventh inning opened with the score tied at 1 to 1. Laporte was safe on Bush's wide throw and Kleinow sacrificed. Warhop fouled to Moriarty. But right here was where William got wild. He walked the next three batsmen, the last one forcing Laporte home. Elberfeld hit an easy bounder to Schaefer, who tossed badly to Crawford, the "Tabasco Kid" being safe and Demmitt scoring. Elberfeld elected to proceed to the next base and Bush spurned Crawford's throw, Austin following Demmitt to the home port.

Donovan walked the first three to face him in the eighth, and it looked as though all the Yanks had to do to score was to give an accurate invitation of a lamppost, but the next three got anxious and were retired.

In the ninth Donovan was not so wild, but easier to hit, and two more runs were added on heavy hitting, aided by a bad throw by Schmidt to catch Keeler stealing.

In sharp contrast to Donovan, young Mr. Warhop of the Hilltop pitched a swell game. Just seven Tigers became base runners during his time upon the slab, one of these on an error and another through a fielder's choice. The only run scored against him was helped by the error, though likely it would have been scored anyway.

Cobb opened Detroit's fifth inning with a double down the first base chalkline. Jones bunted. Kleinow got the ball and made a low throw to first, which got away from Chase, Cobb going all the way home. A moment later Moriarty flied to deep left.

Manager Stallings has asked waivers on Jack Chesbro, once the premier twirler of the country.

Crawford played first to-day because Rossman underwent an operation for an abscess on his foot.

"MATTY" HAS FINGER BROKEN.

Giants' Star Pitcher Injured by a Liner from Delehanty's Bat.

New York's chances of winning the National League pennant received a serious setback yesterday afternoon when, in the seventh inning of the game with St. Louis, "Christy" Mathewson, the team's star pitcher, had the second finger of his left hand broken in stopping a liner from Delehanty's bat. Mathewson has been New York's one consistent winner this season and has not been defeated since May 24.

The big pitcher had to leave the game at once, and a surgeon who reduced the fracture said that it would be at least two weeks before he could pitch again. Manager McGraw was banking heavily on Mathewson in the series with Chicago starting to-morrow.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

W. H. MURPHY.—Schedules in the assignment of William H. Murphy, photo supplies, 12 East Fifteenth Street, show liabilities of $12,472, nominal assets of $3,152, and actual assets of $873.

RUDOLPH LUHRS.—Judge Hand has appointed Benjamin Bulmer receiver in bankruptcy for Rudolph Luhrs, trading as Adolph Luhrs & Sons, wines and liquors, 514 Sixth Avenue; bond, $750.

LEWIS B. STERN.—Judge Hand has appointed George J. Thompson receiver in bankruptcy for Lewis B. Stern, men's furnishing goods, 1,074 Third Avenue; bond, $1,000. It was stated that the assets consist of stock $2,000 and accounts $500, and that Mr. Stern has abandoned his place of business.

NEW YORK EXPORT AND IMPORT COMPANY.—Judge Hand has appointed Hugh A. Bayne receiver in bankruptcy for the New York Export and Import Company of 133 Front Street, in place of Elliott H. Goodwin, who did not qualify, and fixed his bond at $25,000. It was stated that the company has checks for about $20,000 received in payment of goods, but could not deposit them in banks because the banks had taken hold of all deposits on hand for unpaid balances, and the company wished to turn over the checks to the receiver. There are unfilled orders on hand for $100,000, on which the company ought to realize a profit of 10 per cent. The bills and accounts payable were $137,045, less $21,000 deposited in banks, leaving a balance of $116,045. The banks also collected $10,000 out of the deposits on notes which fell due.

Would Not Sell Kling for $50,000.

President Murphy of the Chicago National League team was very emphatic in declaring yesterday that neither the Brooklyn club nor any other club in the country would get Catcher John Kling. "I wouldn't take $50,000 for Kling," said Mr. Murphy. "Not that he is worth that much, but there is a principle involved in the matter, and I propose to stand firm. Mr. Ebbets made me a generous offer for Kling, and if the case were an ordinary one I should favor giving him up to Brooklyn. But Kling has not acted in a sportsmanlike manner to the Chicago club, and I have come to the conclusion that he must play with the club of which I am the head or with none at all."

Boat to be ready in the United States by the end of April, 1910, and a rough estimate of cost for crew and provisions to bring boat to destination is also desired. Six tons of caustic soda and four tons of silicate of soda are called for, to be delivered by Sept. 30, 1909. Tenders will not be received after noon on July 29. Interested firms may procure the specifications on application at the Bureau of Manufactures.

3,660—WHEELBARROWS, STEEL SCRAPERS, &c.—There is a good field for wheelbarrows, steel scrapers, and mining machinery in a city in Mexico. The American Consul there sends a list of prominent dealers in this line of goods.

3,661—CAPITAL FOR DEVELOPING MANGANESE MINE AND LUMBER INDUSTRY.—A New York house has forwarded to the Bureau of Manufactures a copy of a letter received from a Russian business man regarding an opportunity to develop a manganese mine and the lumber industry in that country. He states that a good market is available for the products, and would like to get in touch with American capitalists who will take over the working of the mines and the manufacture of the lumber into finished material. He further adds that the Russian Government is desirous of interesting capital in such enterprises, and it is hoped that many facilities will thus be acquired.

3,662.—MEATS AND PROVISIONS.—A merchant in a Latin-American country informs an American Consular officer that he would like to get in touch with firms in the United States that handle flour, meal, crackers, beef, pork, kerosene, oil, &c. He also desires to subscribe to a few trade journals.

3,663.—CABLE - LAYING MACHINES.—An American Consul in the United Kingdom reports that a firm in his district wishes to correspond with American manufacturers of cable-laying machines for Manila hemp ropes.

3,665.—RAILWAY SUPPLIES.—In a report from a country in Latin America a Consul states that considerable purchases of railway supplies are made in the United States owing to the quicker delivery and cheaper freights. He furnishes the address of a party charged with making these contracts for railway material.

3,669.—COTTON YARNS AND LOOSE COTTON SLIVER.—The Bureau of Manufactures is in receipt of a letter from a manufacturer of insulated wire goods in New York stating that it is in the market for considerable quantities of Southern cotton yarns and loose cotton sliver. BEADLESTON & WOERZ, BREWERS, NEW YORK.

We take a long step to-day to clear up our men's Summer suits—the odd lots left by a most successful season.

Mixtures, and a few serges.

2574 suits, of which 360 were $18 and 2214 suits were $20, $22 and $25.

$15.

911 suits, of which 59 were $22, and 852 suits were $25, $28 and $30.

$20.

Beside these suits at $15 and $20, you now find extra values all through our men's suit stock.

Also—all youths' mixture suits, sizes 32 to 35 chest, have been marked down to $15, $18 and $20.

Here's one on us!

The price now is $15, and we'll pay $5 to any man who buys one. Who dares?

Ask for lot 6932—the joke suit.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Move Up Again—Call Money Rates, 1½@2 Per Cent.

CROP PROSPECTS A FACTOR

Granger Roads' Shares Active—Union Pacific's Sale of Atchison Preferred—Time Money Market Still Hardening.

In a rather narrow market, where the inactivity appeared even greater than it really was, owing to the concentration of business upon a limited number of stocks, prices moved forward yesterday with considerable vigor. The movement was not uninterrupted, however, for a set-back occasioned by profit taking followed; a sharp advance near the opening and what seemed to be a professional move against securities served to check a renewed rise late in the day, although at the close the advance was again under full headway. It was once more the prospect of excellent crop returns which determined the market's course, for the Granger stocks were again the leaders. They were pressed closely for this position, however, by many of the industrials, particularly those catering to the railroads, and so largely did the day's business centre in securities of the kind mentioned that elsewhere fluctuations were narrow and transactions insignificant. Curiously enough, while stocks of railroads traversing the wheat and corn country were advancing on the prospect of good crops, prices on grain markets, at least for the September and December options, were also rising. To offset the advance in the options named there was a very sharp fall in July wheat. In the weekly weather report of the Government, issued during the day, there was not the least evidence of unseasonable conditions in any section of the wheat or corn territory, but such evidence is by no means necessary to convince Chicago speculators in wheat of the necessity for higher prices, as recent movements on the Board of Trade in that city have clearly proved. Outside of such items as a further small advance in the price of pig iron at Eastern furnaces and in the quotations for copper on the local Metal Exchange and the sale by the Union Pacific of the $10,000,000 of Atchison preferred stock held in its treasury, a transaction which still further increases Union Pacific's already large holdings of cash, the day was rather barren of developments.

In the money market some further indications of firmness in time rates made their appearance, and bankers reported steady if moderate expansion of demand for accommodation on the part of miscellaneous out-of-town borrowers. The foreign exchange market was quiet, with little change in rates, and the day passed without announcement of further engagements of gold for export to South American points.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Better cash demand in the Southwest from mills and elevators and late reports of high temperatures in the Northwest strengthened prices yesterday. All interior markets received 424,000 bushels, against 1,072,000 bushels a year ago. The decrease of $3,838,000 bushels in world's stocks compared with 3,658,000 bushels reduction last year. Cables showed a partial decline of ¼d at Liverpool and a drop of 1½c at Budapest, with Berlin closing unchanged. No export business was reported. Cash wheat in New York was irregular, closing as follows: Old No. 2 red, $1.42 nominal in elevator and free on board afloat; new No. 2 red, $1.22½ free on board afloat end August; old No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.44¼, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.36¼, both nominal.

CORN.—Renewed complaints of hot, dry weather in Oklahoma, and the estimate of only 173 cars in Chicago on Wednesday, against 254 cars received Tuesday, gave a strong undertone yesterday. Liverpool closed ½d net lower. Total Western receipts amounted to 578,000 bushels, compared with 384,000 bushels the previous year. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted 78¼c for old in elevator and 65c for new free on board afloat, Winter shipment.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Sluggish Market, with Prices Moving Toward Lower Levels on the Curb.

COPPERS ARE IRREGULAR

Nipissing and Goldfield Consolidated Weak—Bond List More Active, with Western Pacific 5s Showing Strength.

Curb trading was sluggish yesterday outside of a few issues, and in the light trading a number of the copper shares sold fractionally off. Cumberland-Ely, Ohio Copper, Ray Central, and British Columbia closed even with opening prices. Nevada Consolidated sold down from 23½ to 23⅜ on transactions of 400 shares; Greene-Cananea gained ⅛, closing at 9¾, after transactions of 600; Ray Consolidated sold down from 17¼ to 16½, and United Copper lost ¾ on the day's trading, closing at 9½, after transactions of 700. Nipissing was weak, closing at 11⅛, ¼ below the opening, after selling down to 11. Goldfield Consolidated, after opening at 6¼, closed at 6. The bond list showed a greater diversity of interest, the 5 per cent. bonds of the Western Pacific leading, with transactions of $100,000, on which the price rose from 98 to 98⅛.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Puzzled by Atchison Sale.

At first Wall Street did not seem to know exactly whether to take the announcement of the Union Pacific sale of its $10,000,000 Atchison preferred stock as a bull or a bear argument. That such a transaction had been made became definitely known just before noon, and publication of the news was followed by considerable hesitancy in price movements in leading stocks. The first impulse of the traders was to jump to the conclusion that if Mr. Harriman thought this a good time to unload some of the Union Pacific's investment holdings, it might also be an appropriate occasion for them to get out of their stocks and sell a few short into the bargain. They quickly recalled the recent announcement of the sale by the Union Pacific of its $37,500,000 Southern Pacific convertible bonds, which constitute what amounts to a call on Southern Pacific common. That stock is popularly supposed to be headed toward a 7 per cent. dividend basis, and naturally the rank and file of traders have been greatly perplexed as to the whys and wherefores of the whole business.

Suspicious of the Obvious.

On more mature deliberation, most of the traders were rather inclined to believe that the Union Pacific's action in selling its Atchison preferred might have something more behind it than appeared, and were accordingly disposed to revise their earlier views of the matter. On the surface, it might be construed as meaning that Mr. Harriman had decided that prices were high enough, and as long as the Union Pacific was able to get out of the Atchison stock it purchased three years ago about even, it might as well do so. But such a "tip" was rather too obvious to carry with it an air of plausibility or conviction. Wall Street never likes to put its faith in anything which appears too obvious, but always suspects deep and hidden motives back of every deal of magnitude. Just before the close of business, Union made a new high record at 198⅞.

Temporary Reaction in Steel.

Apparently, while some one was looking in the other direction, the peg which kept United States Steel common at 71⅞ Monday slipped a few notches yesterday, but before long it was recovered and placed in its old position, so that the stock again closed at the familiar figure of 71⅞. In the interval it had dropped to 71⅛, and this, during the early part of the session, induced some liquidation and short selling in other shares. There was less talk concerning the prospect of a dividend increase next Tuesday, and those who were stoutly asserting a week ago that not only would a 1 per cent. regular dividend be declared for the quarter, but an extra dividend of one-half of 1 per cent. would be thrown in, were not quite so confident, admitting that the Directors might be satisfied with doubling the present rate, making it 1 per cent. flat for the quarter. Others who had contended right along that an increase in the dividend at this time would be bad business and worse politics were satisfied to allow their views on the subject to rest unchanged.

Erie and Rock Island.

An abortive attempt undertaken early in the day to do something worth while with the Erie issues met with more success in the last hour of business, when the transactions in that stock reached heavy volume at sharply advancing quotations. The common and second preferred issues gained about 1½ per cent., while the first preferred added half as much to its credit. In the late dealings, execution of orders in Erie common ranging from 500 to 5,000, in single blocks, was a feature of the market. From the size of the transactions, it was inferred that the buying was for account of substantial interests. It was suspected that the same people who have put up Rock Island, and were still working at the same job yesterday, had a hand in the Erie operations. The promise of a dividend on Rock Island preferred before the year is out explains the absorption going on there, but Erie stockholders have nothing of that sort that they can see without badly straining the optic nerve in the attempt.

Dividend Increase Talk.

Among the specialties American Cotton Oil common and Twin City Rapid Transit monopolized most attention. The former enjoyed a maximum advance of 2¼ per cent., reaching a new high record at 76¼, but lost nearly half the gain before the close. That the dividend on this stock will be increased in the Fall seems to be fairly certain, the only thing in doubt being the amount of the increase. It now receives 3 per cent. yearly, and is being bought on the expectation that the rate will be doubled. Insiders, while freely admitting that the rate may go to 5 per cent., are not definitely committing themselves to a higher figure. In the case of Twin City Rapid Transit, which gained 2 points, the buying was also chiefly inspired by the talk of larger disbursements to shareholders. In both cases earnings are large.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Lawrence Slade, who has been connected with the Trust Company of America for several years, was appointed an Assistant Secretary of that company yesterday.

Daniel Guggenheim, Murry Guggenheim, and S. R. Guggenheim, syndicate managers, announce that, having sold a large part of the $4,000,000 6 per cent 10-year convertible gold bonds of the Braden Copper Mines Company, operating in Chile, they are offering the balance for subscription at 101½ and interest. This issue is protected by a sinking fund and is redeemable at 105 and interest at thirty days' notice. The bonds are convertible into stock at redemption. Applications should be accompanied by 5 per cent. of the total. Subscriptions close on July 23, allotments being payable Aug. 2. The issue has been underwritten.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Americans Generally Firm at Close in London.

LONDON, July 20.—Money was in quiet demand and in plentiful supply on the market to-day, and discounts were easy. The Bank of England probably will get the remainder of the $3,000,000 in gold available yesterday, a portion of which was secured by Russia.

Trading on the Stock Exchange continues to be quietly firm, with an upward tendency in several directions, notably home rails and gilt-edged securities, under investment buying, and Kaffirs, on bear covering and South African buying.

American securities opened steady and a fraction higher. The shares of the United States Steel Corporation and the Harriman roads were in demand during the first hour, and on this buying the market advanced. At noon a firm tone prevailed, with prices ranging from ⅛ to ⅝ above yesterday's New York closing. New York supported the market well in the afternoon, and the close was steady, with the exception of United States Steel, which was inclined to ease.

Bar silver steady, 23½d per ounce.

Money ½@¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1¼ per cent.; for three months' bills, 1 5-16@1⅜ per cent.

PARIS, July 20.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 67½c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 19c for checks.

BERLIN, July 20.—Trading generally on the Boerse to-day was quiet. American railroad securities were firm.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 20.—Trading in the market was rather light to-day, although transactions were well distributed. Giroux lost a fraction of the advance made yesterday, but a large amount of stock was bought and sold on the decline. North Butte was active and in good demand at between 51½ and 52. Helvetia, which was to-day listed on the Boston Exchange, fluctuated between 6½ and 7. The undertone in the general list held steady, but trading continued light throughout the session.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—The uncertain tone of such shares as Reading and United States Steel exerted a restraining influence upon the local trading to-day. For a time the Asphalts, United Gas, and Electric Storage Battery advanced on light buying orders, whereas Lehigh Valley, Philadelphia Electric, Cambria Steel, and Bell Telephone were a trifle reactionary. THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee was generally easier yesterday, closing barely steady, net unchanged to 15 points lower. July and August were relatively steady on light offerings, while other positions were 10@15 points lower.

The market opened unchanged to 10 points lower in response to the decline of ¼@½f in France, and the heavy Brazilian movement. German prices were unchanged to ½ lower at the New York opening. Neither Brazilian market reported any change. The weather was very cold in all districts of Sao Paulo.

Spot coffee was quiet; 7⅝@7¾c for Rio No. 7.

Braden Copper Mines Co.
SIX PER CENT TEN YEAR CONVERTIBLE GOLD BONDS
Convertible into stock ($5 per share) at par
DATED JUNE 1, 1909. DUE JUNE 1919.
Secured by a Collateral Trust Mortgage on all of the First Mortgage Bonds and Capital Stock of the Braden Copper Co.
Interest payable June 1 and December 1, in New York City.
Trustee, FARMERS' LOAN & TRUST COMPANY, New York.
Denomination $500 Each. Either Coupon or Registered.

The issue may be redeemed or purchased at the option of the Company in whole or in part within ten years from June 1st, 1909, at 105 and accrued interest, out of a sinking fund derived from a stipulated percentage of the ore mined; the bondholders to have the privilege of converting before the redemption date any bonds that may be called.

These bonds are secured by all the property of the Braden Copper Company, consisting of approximately 1,200 acres of mineralized lands in Chili, South America, containing extensive copper mines, of milling and smelting plants and a railway 43½ miles in length, together with its equipment, tramways, terminal lands, water rights, townsites, stores, etc.

Based on a daily tonnage of 2,000 tons, as is now contemplated, the cost of producing refined copper delivered in London or New York should not exceed 8 cents per pound. The net profits per year on a basis of 13 cents copper with a plant treating 2,000 tons per day, are estimated at $1,177,000. Every cent rise in the price of copper metal will increase the net earnings $235,000 per annum.

The proceedings for the creation of this issue of bonds and of the stock and bonds of the Braden Copper Company pledged by the collateral trust indenture were taken by Messrs. Kendall & Herzog, representing the Company, and approved by Messrs. Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall and Messrs. Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, representing the syndicate managers.

Of these $4,000,000 bonds:
$375,000 are held in the Company's Treasury.
500,000 have been exchanged for Braden Copper Company debenture bonds.
625,000 have been exchanged for Braden Copper Company preferred shares.
2,500,000 have been disposed of by the Company, the proceeds to be used for the construction of a new mill and for equipment and development.

The par value of the new bonds issued in exchange for the old debenture bonds and preferred stock of the Braden Copper Company is less than the actual cash heretofore expended by that Company.

Applications for bonds should be accompanied by 5% of the amount subscribed for. Subscriptions will be closed on Friday, July 23, at 3 o'clock P. M., the right being reserved to reject any applications and to award a smaller amount than applied for and to close subscriptions before that date.

Allotments made upon subscriptions are to be paid at the office of the undersigned on August 2nd, 1909, with interest accrued until that date.

These bonds have been underwritten by responsible parties.

Subscription blanks, together with prospectus containing details concerning the Braden Copper Mines Company, may be had at the office of the undersigned.

Louis M. and Thomas W. (c) such purchasers and their successors or assigns, however, have the right within ninety days after the delivery of the Special Master's deed evidencing the sale made hereunder to elect whether or not to assume or adopt any other lease or any other contract sold with the railroad, or other property and franchises, and neither they nor their successors nor assigns shall be held to have assumed or adopted any of said contracts or leases which they shall so elect not to assume or adopt;

also all debts against the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company, which prior to the entry of the decree shall have been duly presented to the Special Master, as provided by the interlocutory decree heretofore entered, and which shall have been or shall be duly allowed for payment by the Special Master without objection, or by final order, judgment, or decree of said court as a valid debt of said Chicago Great Western Railway Company; and also all debts, obligations and liabilities of the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company which within six months after a notice to be hereafter published by the Special Master providing for the presentation of claims, shall have been duly presented to the Special Master and duly allowed for payment by him without objection or by the final order, judgment and decree of the court, and which if they had accrued and been filed prior to November 1st, 1908, would have been entitled to payment out of the assets of the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company now in the hands of the Receivers.

Provision is made in said decree whereby the purchasers have the right, in the manner therein stated, to contest any such claim, demand or allowance so payable by the purchasers or which would be chargeable against the property purchased.

4. The undersigned Special Master, as directed by the said decrees, will accept no bid for the property for a sum less than twelve million dollars, and will accept no bid from or on behalf of any person unless that person, on or before the day preceding the day of sale, shall have placed in the hands of the undersigned Special Master or deposited with him, the sum of five hundred thousand dollars in money or in a certified check upon some national bank or trust company satisfactory to him, as a pledge that such person will make good any bid made by him in case such bid shall be accepted. The deposit received from any person whose bid shall not be accepted will be returned to him after the sale of the property. The deposit received from the successful bidder will be applied toward the payment of the purchase price of the property in case such bidder complies with the terms of the sale, obeys the orders of the court regarding the same and completes his purchase. If he fails so to do, such deposit, as provided by said decree, without further or other proceedings ipso facto will be forfeited as a penalty for such failure, and will be applied as the court may direct. If, however, without fault of the bidder, any sale for which a deposit shall have been made, shall not be confirmed by the court, such deposit will be returned to the bidder. Unless such deposit shall be made as aforesaid and a bid of not less than twelve million dollars be made at the sale, the undersigned will adjourn the sale and apply to the court for further instructions.

5. Upon confirmation of the sale by the court, the purchaser shall make further cash payment or payments on account of the purchase price bid, as and when the court may order. Toward the payment of the balance of the purchase price not required by the order of the court to be paid in cash, the purchasers may turn in any claims against the defendant Chicago Great Western Railway Company which have been duly filed and allowed by the Special Master without objection or by the court, and the full amount thereof will be credited upon such purchase price.

6. If the proceeds of such sale shall be more than necessary to pay the debts and obligations of the said Chicago Great Western Railway Company duly allowed, and the other payments required by the said decrees to be made and if there shall remain in the hands of the Special Master, a sum distributable to the stockholders of said Chicago Great Western Railway Company, such sum will be distributed in the order of the preferences of the several classes of stock under the Articles of Incorporation and as in said decrees provided; and to the extent that such shares of stock on such distribution would be entitled to share in the proceeds of such sale, the Special Master will accept from the purchasers a tender of certificates for such shares in lieu of an equal amount of cash otherwise payable upon the price bid.

7. For the purpose of enforcing the provisions of the decrees, jurisdiction of the cause is retained by the court, which reserves the right to re-take and re-sell the said property in case the purchasers, their successors or assigns shall fail to comply with any order of the court in respect to the payments to be made by such purchaser.

For a more specific description of the property to be sold and for particulars of the terms and conditions of such sale reference is hereby made to the above mentioned decrees.

Dated July 16th, 1909.

RUNAWAY BOY HOME, IN FORTUNE'S FAVOR

Returns After Nine Years with Fame as Champion Marathon Runner of Canada.

LONG GIVEN UP AS DEAD

But the Mother Still Vaguely Hoped That Little Hans Would Keep His Promise, and He Did.

Mrs. Alice Holmer, wife of Peter Holmer, an electrical engineer of 366 Bronx Park Avenue, West Farms, was making bread in her kitchen early Monday afternoon, thinking among other things of the little son who had run away in anger nine years before, when the family, smaller and more comfortable than now, lived in an old farmhouse on the Southern Boulevard, near 178th Street. That boy was her eldest, and she was sure he was dead, for never one word of him or from him had she heard.

At just about that time there stood before a row of brick tenements on Southern Boulevard, near 178th Street, a tall, athletic looking young man. He was Hans Holmer, champion Marathon runner of Canada, whose long swinging stride had carried him in the victor last Saturday in the Marathon race at Atlantic City.

He now looked bewildered. He took his hat from his head, and in a puzzled way passed his hand over his thick, tawny hair. Then he turned and walked to the old West Farms Square, where for years the village smithy had stood.

"Does Paul Holmer, the blacksmith, live here?" he asked. "No," they told him. "He long ago retired."

"Well, does any one know anything about Peter Holmer?" asked the runner with a catch in his voice.

"Sure," said a small boy, "I do, I know his kids. "I'll show yer to his house."

Mrs. Holmer in her kitchen remembered how nine years before, when West Farms was nothing but a country village, and she had only six in her family instead of eight, this oldest boy had played with his brother Bert about the country side.

They had had two dogs, the boys, a pointer and a setter, and their father, an old-time sea Captain, with strict rules of discipline, though a kind father, had barred the dogs from the house. Then one day, for the tenth time, the dogs came in through the connivance of the boys. The father was very angry. Bert was not in the room just then, but Hans was, and Mr. Holmer spoke to him harshly. Hans left the room in anger.

The next day he came to his mother, a slight, tow-headed little boy then, and in his eyes the anger still shone.

"Mother," said he, twisting his cap, "I'm going away. I am not coming back till I have made you all proud of me. I am not going to write, either."

No Hans Turned Up.

With that he turned and marched out. Mrs. Holmer throught he was joking, and Mr. Holmer said:

"Oh! he'll get tired of it and come back all right." Time passed, but no Hans returned.

The years slid by and the family of six became eight. It was hard for one man to care for so many, though Holmer's work was steady and good, and finally they moved to their little house in Bronx Park Avenue.

Bert grew up and became an electrical engineer. Four years ago, in that position he went to Lima, Peru, to build street railways. Six weeks ago his mother, looking from the front door, saw a tall, straight young man walk up.

"Why," she said, "that looks like Bert."

The young man vaulted the fence and took the steps at a bound.

"Oh! my mother," he cried.

He had great tales to tell of his success in Peru, and letters of recommendation to show, and money to help on the little Holmers. Yet the mother in her joy still yearned for Hans. One of her neighbors used to say:

"Oh! he'll come back, sometime," and Mrs. Holmer hoped so, too, till he was twenty-one—she almost expected him then—after that she gave him up.

"It would be too much like a story to be true," she said.

The father, too, had come to count him dead. But three nights ago something happened that started him again to thinking. With his son and a small boy he went to a moving-picture show, and one series told the story of a prodigal.

That boy on the screen wandered away after some quarrel, just as Hans had done. His brother stayed by the parents. But they grew older, and times were hard. Finally there was nothing for it but the poorhouse, and there they were taken. But just then there came a strange man, yet familiar, and he brought money and jewelry, and bought back the old house, for he was the black sheep returned rich from the West.

That night Holmer suggested advertising for the boy in the newspapers. Mrs. Holmer, reviewing all this in her mind Monday, heard a sharp ring at the door.

"Don't go," she called to her daughter Margaret. "It will be one of those peddlers."

But the bell rang and rang again, and finally Margaret went to the door. The broad-shouldered man with light hair stood at the door.

"What do you want!" asked Margaret.

"Don't you know me?" asked the man, and then he passed through the hall, for he had seen his mother in the kitchen. Going straight to her, he said: "Mother, I am Hans."

Mrs. Holmer staggered back, her hands to her pale face, as he came on, and she breathed deeply. "Oh, Hans!" she said, "you gave me a dreadful shock."

"Do you remember what I said when I went away, mother?" asked Hans.

He Kept His Word.

"That you would come back when you had made a name," said the mother.

"I have done it," said Hans.

"In what way, Hans?" asked the mother.

Hans tossed a purse into her lap. It held $100. "Would you like to buy this house, mother? Never you worry again. I am the champion runner of Canada. I am started on a career."

Then there was a great deal of weeping and embracing, and the two smallest children, Charlotte and Anna, whom Hans had never seen, were brought in, and all the others, including John, who is 12 and could not remember Hans at all—all were there but the father and Bert. They were at work in East Chester. When Mrs. Holmer had collected her wits she called to a neighbor's boy:

"Go to Mr. Holmer and tell him to come home; that Hans is back and must go away again in three hours."

That was true, for Hans has a race in Quebec to-day, and later he will sail to race in England.

"Mother," said Hans, "I could tell you the strangest story you ever heard; how I worked my way to Canada every step and what I did there and how for more than four years I was a soldier in the Canadian Army, and then became an athlete, but I will wait till we have a whole day together, for it's a long story."

Then, much excited, in came the father and Bert. They thought it might be a joke. Bert had said only the day before "He must be dead, for we were such chums, I'm sure he would have written if he had lived. But there, sure enough, right under the crayon made of him when he was a boy, was the real Hans, and when his father saw him he broke down entirely, and Bert had his brother in old-fashioned boyish embrace.

After that there was any amount of crying and laughing, and then Hans began pulling presents from his pockets—sleeve buttons and a stickpin for Bert and a beautiful big pipe for his father, and for his mother a shawl, and money for every one else in the family, whether they were there when he left it or not.

So for three hours the Holmer family was all together for the first time in the world. And when Hans went away to win more victories he promised an early return and a long visit.

MARRIED IN PIQUE; REPENTS.

Cohen Divorce Petition Discloses Domestic Woes of Manufacturer.

Joseph Cohen, a corset manufacturer, who owns some twenty-five stores in this city, divorced by his first wife, is being sued by his second wife, Minnie Cohen, née Kaufman. The second Mrs. Cohen filed a motion yesterday through her attorney, Abraham Goldfarb, before Justice Stapleton of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn. She wants $1,000 counsel fee and $75 a week alimony. Cohen and his first wife, Celia, lived happily together until about two years ago. Then, despite the efforts of their four children, Mrs. Cohen divorced her husband. Until about a month ago she was receiving $100 a week alimony. At that time it was reduced to $40 a week.

In an affidavit Cohen alleges that his first wife made overtures to him for a reconciliation. He, fearing he might yield, sought another marriage, and was introduced to Minnie Kaufman, 27 years old. He met her but once, and they went to Bridgeport, Conn., where, he says, "some sort of a ceremony" was performed.

Mr. Cohen alleges his wife called him names and was disrespectful to his four children.

Mrs. Cohen, in her petition for divorce, alleges she was compelled to call the police to get into her home. She declares the Cohen children, armed with rolling pins and other implements, tried to keep her out. She got in, but next day there was more trouble, and the police were called in again. While attending the funeral of her mother, she alleges, Mr. Cohen had the house stripped of all furniture. Then she went to live with her brother, Max Kaufman, in Bay Ridge.

DISGUISE BELLEVUE LUXURIES

The Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals took up yesterday charges of misconduct against Frank Eckstein, auditor in the bookkeeping department, where he has been employed for seventeen years. It is alleged that on five occasions he certified doctored bills for supplies to the household of the General Medical Superintendent of Bellevue, Dr. W. H. Smith, and the Assistant Superintendent, Michael J. Rickard.

The amount involved in the five charges is only $62.13, but Dr. John W. Brannan, President of the board, explained yesterday that the matter is being investigated "not so much because of the amounts involved, but for the principle of the thing."

Bellevue Hospital purchases staple food supplies, such as fresh fruit and vegetables, in the open market. The staff of the hospital receive their supplies from this source. It is charged now that delicacies have been bought and entered on the bills submitted to the board as vegetables or fruit, and that in the cases specified typewritten bills for regulation articles have been substituted for the hand-written bills received from the dealers in delicacies. Roquefort cheese, pigs' knuckles, and different kinds of wines are some of the luxuries said to have been supplied in this way.

This imposition has been practiced for several years, the Finance Committee believes. Similar charges may be brought in the near future against another Bellevue employe of high standing. He, it is alleged, permitted these irregularities to go on.

ASKS PARDON BY WIRELESS.

Mrs. Lancaster Regrets Departure for Europe with Alleged Count.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 20.—Mrs. Joseph F. Lancaster of the Back Bay district, who sailed from New York on the liner Baltic on July 17 with "Count" Guido Castarelli de Gregorio, has repented of her action She has used the wireless telegraph to send messages to her husband and mother, asking for love and forgiveness. Other wireless messages from the Baltic have assured her family that while she is aboard ship she will be free from the influence of the "Count."

While the New York officials of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company denied that Mr. Lancaster sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse in pursuit of his wife, in the belief that she had been hypnotized by the "Count," it is asserted that Mr. Lancaster had determined to sail by the first available liner. The Kaiser's list showed no man of the name of Lancaster aboard. From the Lancaster family here no information as to what boat he was to take can be obtained. There is no possibility that Mr. Lancaster can reach England in advance of his wife, but friends who will meet her on the other side may detain her until he arrives.

Gypsy Band to be Deported.

Twenty-four gypsies, who arrived here on the Lamport & Holt liner Tennyson a week ago from Buenos Ayres will be deported to-morrow on the same company's liner Verdi. The party consists of six men and eighteen women and children, and has $1,500 in cash in its possession.

The gypsies through the interpreter, told the board at Ellis Island that they had come originally from Roumania, and had been wandering for some years in South America. Their destination was California, they said.

Since they have learned that they are to be deported the men have amused themselves by drawing their fingers across their throats with a peculiar clucking sound whenever a deportation officer approaches their side of the pen. This has made some of the officers very thoughtful, especially as the transfer to the steamer is to be made at night.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

MASONTOWN, West Va., July 20.—The most disastrous fire in the history of this place broke out in L. H. Miller's department store on Main Street about 2 o'clock this morning, and before the flames were controlled the Hotel Altman and the Fanston and Maddas blocks were destroyed, entailing a loss estimated at $300,000. The heaviest losses sustained were: Hotel Altman, $125,000; Henry L. Hershfield, clothier, $10,000; Charles Richey, furniture dealer, $15,000; L. H. Miller, department store, $8,000.

PITTSBURG, July 20.—A spectacular fire early to-day did about $75,000 damage. It started in the four-story brick building at 520 Federal Street, north side, occupied by the Kirby Shoe Company. The flames spread to the Star Theatre building adjoining, and the eight-story building of the Real Estate Savings and Trust Company at 518 Federal Street was threatened. At times the flames soared 100 feet into the air.

ORANGE, Va., July 20.—Fire that swept the business district here to-day caused $75,000 damage, only partially covered by insurance. Last November two blocks were burned over. The property destroyed to-day included the Piedmont Hotel, the Orange Star Building, and the station of the Southern and Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads.

SAYS HER SISTER IS HIDDEN BY HUSBAND

Miss Langert Alleges George Has Restrained His Wife Against Her Will.

WAS FREED FROM BELLEVUE

Mrs. George Then Told Her, Miss Langert Declares, That George Had Threatened Her.

Miss Matilda Langert obtained a writ of habeas corpus from Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday against Samuel George of 301 East Sixty-third Street, alleging that he and other persons are restraining her sister, Christina, who is George's wife, of her liberty, and that her present whereabouts are unknown. The writ ordered George to produce his wife in court.

The petitioner alleges that George caused his wife to be committed to the insane ward in Bellevue Hospital, but that when she visited her sister on July 4 she was told by the physician that she would be liberated on July 5. She left there on that day and went to her sister's home in Long Island City and confided to her that she was afraid her husband would try to have her sent to another institution where she could not get away, that he had threatened her, and she feared that he would do her grave injury. If anything happened to her, or if she was confined again, the petitioner says, her sister made her promise that she would institute legal proceedings to obtain her release.

Not long after this Mrs. George returned to her home, and on July 12 her sister received a letter from her saying that her husband wanted her to take the children and go into the country, where he would obtain a cottage. She wanted advice on the matter, but the sister alleges she did not feel like giving it.

Apparently, the petitioner says, George prevailed upon his wife to go somewhere with him outside of the city, taking the six children with them. She alleges that George returned after a few hours, accompanied by the children, but that she does not know where her sister is, nor can she find out.

Further than this, she alleges that not long after the youngest child, seventeen months old, died, that its mother was not at the funeral, and now another of the children is ill in a hospital. Her sister, she says, is devoted to her children, and would not voluntarily be separated from them. At the time of her visit to Bellevue, the petitioner says, she talked with the doctors regarding her sister's condition, and was informed by them and the nurses as well that she was of sound mind.

Mr. George, who is a plumbing contractor, said at his home last evening that his wife was now in a private sanitarium, but would not tell where. He said that she was sent to Bellevue at the suggestion of the family physician, Dr. Richard R. Burke, and that about three years ago she spent some time at the same institution.

"At that time," he continued, "she had delusions that I was going to do her harm, and I suppose she had the same when she visited her sister in Long Island City. Her confessor, Father Wilson of the Dominican Freres Church, said to me only this morning that sending her away to the place where she now is was the best thing I could do for her, and I am paying for her treatment just as much as I can afford. My wife knows perfectly well where she is and why she is there, and when I saw her on Saturday last said she liked the place."

Mr. George then said that his sister-in-law had caused all the trouble; that she had threatened to break up the family on several occasions, and that his wife had warned the children to have nothing to do with her. This was corroborated by his eldest daughter.

$15 IN DEAD MAN'S MOUTH.

Undertaker Has Man Arrested Who Knew They Were There.

Michael Murphy, a driver of 1,332 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, was locked up in Police Headquarters last night by Detectives Fitzpatrick and MacConeghy on suspicion of knowing something about the death of Andrew Erickson of 11 Chatham Square, whose body was found on Monday in Jamaica Bay. Murphy might never have been arrested had he not visited the undertaking establishment of Samuel J. Murphy, at 255 Pearl Street, where Erickson's body was taken.

Murphy called there and told Undertaker Murphy that he was an old friend of Erickson, and therefore would appreciate it if he might be left alone for a few moments with the body. The undertaker entered the room in a few minutes, however, and found Murphy working at the mouth of the dead man. The undertaker investigated and found that there were three $5 bills in Erickson's mouth. Murphy's evident attempt to get the bills aroused the undertaker's suspicions, and he notified the police, who caught Murphy last night in a saloon in Park Row.

According to the police Murphy confessed that he and Erickson went out in a rowboat in Jamaica Bay on Sunday with a sailor who was intoxicated. The sailor had $15, and, according to Murphy, Erickson took this, and they were rowing to the shore when Erickson lost an oar and jumped overboard after it. In trying, however, to recover the oar, Erickson, according to Murphy, was drowned. After trying to recover his companion's body Murphy rowed ashore with the sailor and, taking leave of him, returned to the city, where on Monday he heard of the recovery of Erickson's body.

Charity Guild Wants Donations.

The New York City Branch of the National Plant, Flower, and Fruit Guild has had so many requests for grape juice and jelly for the use of visiting nurses in their visits among the poor sick that it is unable to meet the demand and will be grateful for donations. The branch sends these delicacies to the city's sick poor who are unable to procure them in any other way. The branch will either send for the donation or receive it at its office, 70 Fifth Avenue, Room 47.

STATIONS FOR NEW SUBWAY.

Tentative Plans Announced—Few Express Stops, Permitting High Speed.

The Public Service Commission made public yesterday a provisional list of stations for the Broadway-Lexington Avenue Subway, on which the Bradley-Gaffney-Steers combination is a bidder according to the route which the commission has approved. The list as now given out is tentative only, and the commission is anxious that citizens interested in the matter shall all get the information at the same time. The commission has been deluged with suggestions as to stations on this route.

The permanent list of stations will not be definitely determined until several engineering problems have been settled. As now laid out the new line starts with a terminal at Battery Park, then has stations at Rector, Cortlandt, and Dey Streets, along Church Street.

On Broadway there will be express stations at Murray and Warren Streets and at Canal Street. The next is at Eighty-sixth Street on Lexington Avenue, which will allow trains to be operated at great speed on the express tracks. Local stations on Broadway will be at Prince Street and at Waverley and Astor Places.

In Irving Place there will be a station at Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets, and in Lexington Avenue local stations at Twenty-third Street, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Streets, Thirty-fourth Street, Forty-second and Forty-third Streets, Fifty-first Street, Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets, Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Streets, Seventy-seventh Street, Ninety-sixth Street, 103d and 104th Streets, 110th and 111th Streets, and at 116th and 117th Streets.

Above the Eighty-sixth Street station the next express station will be at 125th Street; then will come a local station at Mott Avenue and 138th Street and an express station at Mott Avenue and 149th Street. Going up on the Jerome Avenue branch in the Bronx there are to be local stations at 161st Street and McClellan Street, on River Avenue; an express station at Elliot Avenue, on Jerome Avenue; local stations at Belmont Street, 176th Street, Burnside Road, and 183d Street; then an express station at Fordham Road and local stations at Kingsbridge Road, 200th Street, and Mosholu Parkway North. TRACY & CO. CREDITORS.

460 Named in a List Filed in the United States Court.

Failing to get schedules in bankruptcy from the failed Stock Exchange house of Tracy & Co. of 40 Wall Street, Hays, Hershfield & Wolf, attorneys for the petitioning creditors, filed a list of 460 creditors in the United States court yesterday without amounts due.

Although at the time of the failure it was said that the firm's committments on the Stock Exchange had been trifling, there are 82 Stock Exchange creditors named in the list. Among them are Banich Brothers, Chauncey & Co., De Coppet & Co., Homans & Co., Kidder & Co., Lawrence & Co., Lounsberry & Co., Mackay & Co., Daniel O'Dell & Co., Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., Turner & Co., and Whitehouse & Co.

E. G. Benedict of Robinson, Biddle & Benedict, who was appointed by Judge Hough as receiver when the involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in May, found the books in a muddle, and it was then said that the Chicago office of the firm was the clearing house for the branch offices, and until reports were received from there the exact position of the creditors could not be stated. The preliminary estimate in the bankruptcy proceedings put the liabilities at $1,250,000, and the assets at $350,000.

The partners in the firm—William W. Tracy, Frederick W. Parker, and Robert D. Covington—did not come forward to the receiver's assistance in straightening out the books. In the schedules without amounts filed yesterday a large number of lettered and numbered accounts appear. Among the creditors appearing by name are F. A. Heinze, special; C. A. Morse, Bartlett Patten & Co., Chicago; Lawrence & Folsom, Chicago; Crews, Lichtenstedt & Co., London; First National Bank of Jamaica, First National Bank of Mineola, A. W. Kilbourne, J. A. Mackay & Co., Montreal, Marsler & Hodgson, Montreal; Merchants' National Bank of New York, Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis; A. J. Pattison & Co., Toronto; Plant & Co., Washington, D. C.; Price & Co., Taylor, Smith & Evans, and Lee Shubert.

BURGLARS CLEAN OUT A FLAT.

Go Through Samuels's Home at Their Leisure and Wreck His Furniture.

Ralph Samuels of 218 140th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, a real estate man, found upon returning home yesterday morning that his apartment on the first floor of that house had been entered by burglars, who had wrecked the furniture and stolen $1,800 worth of personal property, including jewelry, cut glass, fur coats, and the like.

Another loss of jewelry was reported to the Uptown Detective Bureau by Mrs. George W. Wilson, an employe of the Internal Revenue Office, who said that in the last few days some one had stolen a $500 diamond and ruby ring from her rooms in the Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street. Detective Francis Murphy is on that case.

Masters and Pilots Incorporate.

The incorporation of Independent Harbor No. 1 of Masters and Pilots of Steam Vessels was approved by Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday. The objects of the organization are for "the better regulation of matters pertaining to masters and pilots of steam vessels, the promotion of the social welfare of the members of the profession, the elevation of their standing as such, and for the better protection of the lives and property intrusted to their care."

ENJOYED HIS TRIP TO PRISON

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, N. J., July 20.—The youngest prisoner ever held for a capital crime in the State of New Jersey, Joseph Kane, 12 years old, who last Saturday evening shot and killed little Frances Lord, 3 years old, was taken to the old county prison at Mount Holly this afternoon after a Coroner's jury decided that the boy should be held responsible for the tragedy.

The boy prisoner seemed to enjoy his experience on the trolley trip to the county seat with Patrolman Claude Sell. "I wonder if they'll hang me for this," he asked the policeman. When assured that hanging was no longer in force in New Jersey the boy seemed easier in his mind.

"I wish I was out in those woods," he exclaimed as the car passed a shady grove. "That's a bully place to play robber."

"Playin' robber" seems to be the boy's chief joy in life. He was "playin' robber" when he killed Frances Lord.

"Joe's" eyes bulged and he wept a little when the policeman led him up the steps of the old county jail, but he recovered quickly and chatted with the turnkey and Sheriff Worrell before he was assigned to a cell.

What to do with "Joe" is becoming more of a puzzle to the authorities every day. He is too young to be put on trial for manslaughter, and local officials wish that he might be turned over to some "home society," and saved from the reform school.

Testimony of Mrs. Lord at the inquest that she saw her daughter shot, and of eleven-year-old Thomas Ocas, a boy companion of Kane's, that the latter deliberately shot Frances after threatening her life, destroyed the theory that the shooting was an accident.

"He said, 'Me shoot you; me shoot you, Frances.' She cry, and then he shoot her," the Ocas boy testified in broken English, when Prosecutor Atkinson asked him to describe the tragedy. Kane at first charged Ocas with the shooting, but afterward confessed that he did it himself.

Smiling and crying alternately as he answered the prosecutor's questions, the Kane boy was by far the most interesting witness at the inquest. Rather small for his age, with his round face plentifully freckled, the defendant seemed a perfectly normal boy, and a murmur of pity ran through the room as he was called to the witness stand.

The prosecutor asked him if he knew what would become of him if he told an untruth.

"Yes, you'd sent me to the reform school," answered the boy.

"But if you died, what would become of you then, Joe?"

"I'd go to the bad man."

The little prisoner then rehearsed the events leading up to and surrounding the tragedy, which were substantially the same as he had given in part in earlier confessions. He again changed the story to deny that he shot the girl deliberately.

"Tommy had the gun and I took it away from him; Frances came around the corner. 'Lookout, I'm going to shoot you,' I said. She began to cry and then the gun went off," the witness testified. "I had my hand on the trigger," he continued, "but I just pressed it a little. I didn't mean to kill her. We were good friends and often played together."

For nearly an hour and a half the jury deliberated before returning a verdict which was the mildest form under which the boy could be held.

Mrs. Kane, Joe's mother, broke into tears as the Assistant Prosecutor read the verdict, and fainted when Coroner Bisbing remanded him to jail to await the action of the county authorities.

Joe gravely shook hands with several boy friends, who said they were sorry for him and hoped he would get out soon. But he didn't cry.

C., H. & D. RECEIVER RELIEVED.

Court, However, Retains Control of the Road Pending Litigation.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 20.—Judge Lurton, in the United States Appellate Court, to-day relieved Judson Harmon as receiver of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company. The court, however, retains jurisdiction of the property and business of the railway on account of pending litigation.

The plan set up in the petition for the dismissal of the receiver provided for the payment of the floating debts and the debts incurred by the receiver, but the court reserved the right to enforce payment of all outstanding receiver's certificates.

It is stated that Judge Lurton intends to see that there is no unnecessary delay in paying the floating debt of $500,000, the receiver's obligations of $1,500,000, the $1,000,000 claims for supplies and materials furnished the road for six months prior to the receivership, and the $75,000 judgments for personal injuries.

The action of the court to-day paves the way for the absorption of the road by the Baltimore & Ohio.

Few Speakers, Suffrage Meetings End.

Mrs. Pearce Bailey of the Equal Suffrage League, announced yesterday that the Woman's Suffrage meetings, held every Sunday for the last two months on the lawn of the Marble Arch, near Kingsbridge, would be discontinued. This, she said, was because there were now so few good speakers in town.

The Meaning
OF THE Massacres of Christians in Asia Minor

THE NEW-YORK TIMES will begin the publication, in its edition of next Sunday, of a series of articles by James Creelman, who is now journeying through Turkey and the Holy Land for the purposes of studying Moslem fanaticism against the Christian and of learning how far the Mohammedan Church and the Turkish Government are responsible for such atrocities as that of Adana, for example, which was vividly described in THE SUNDAY TIMES two weeks since. Mr. Creelman's articles will go very deeply into the whole matter. They will be of distinct value, and of exceptional interest as well—articles well worthy of the careful attention of every reader.

Orders for The Sunday Times should always be placed with newsdealers in advance of the day of publication.
